Jet goes to Syria; 7 more freed

KUWAIT (UPI) — A commandeered Japan Airlines DC-8 jetliner refueled in Kuwait early Monday and then took off for Syria after the Japanese Red Army hijackers released seven of their 36 hostages.

Kuwait Interior Minister Sheikh Saad Al-Abdulla said the jet left Kuwait International Airport at 3:50 a.m. (7:50 p.m. Sunday CDT).

He said the hijackers notified the Kuwait control tower by radio that the jetliner was bound for Damascaus, the Syrian capital, a flight of about 700 miles.

The minister said four of the released hostages were from Japan, two from Australia and one from Singapore.

THE PLANE originally was refused permission to land but Sheikh Abdulla said he relented after receiving what he called "a last message" from the pilot, Capt. Kumitetsu Sakuraba.

The minister said, "We allowed the plane to land, to refuel and depart after that in appreciation for the circumstances in which the passengers were living on board and because of our knowledge that the fuel was running low and it was impossible to land at any other airport in the area."

The plane left Dacca, Bangladesh Sunday with about 10 hours of fuel aboard and had been in the air nearly eight hours when given permission to land, a spokesman for the airline said.

The authorities then turned on the runway lights and ordered armored vehicles that had been blocking the runway to clear the area.

THE AIRLINE spokesman said the hijackers originally said they were heading for Beirut when they were refused permission to land but changed their minds and insisted on landing in Kuwait.

Interior and Defense Minister Saad al Abdulla and other high officials were in direct command of the situation at the airport tower.

The plane, which also carried six prisoners freed from jails in Japan and $6 million in ransom, took off from Bangladesh after 106 hours of negotiations.

AIRLINE SPOKESMEN identified one of the three Americans still aboard the hijacked plane as Eric Weiss, believed to be from the San Francisco area.

The other two U.S. hostages, both men, were identified only by their surnames, Phalen and McLean.

The plane left Dacca, Bangladesh, at 10:15 a.m. CDT, carrying a full load of fuel for the 3,000-mile journey. Japan Air Lines officials estimated the four-engine craft would have an additional two hours cruising time if it was forced to pass Kuwait.

The Japanese government earlier Sunday urged the Bangladesh government not to allow the plane to take off, but officials in Dacca, under pressure from a coup attempt during the hijack drama that began Wednesday, ordered the plane to leave.

The hijackers, all thought to be less than 30 years of age, seized the plane carrying 156 passengers and crew members Wednesday after takeoff from Bombay on a flight from Paris to Tokyo. They were armed with pistols, hand grenades and plastic explosives.

Groups to ask officials to order underpass study

Arlington Heights officials will be asked tonight to order studies on the economimc impact of an underpass at Arlington Heights Road and the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks.

The request will be made by Robert W. Mills, president of the First Arlington National Bank, at the village board meeting at 8 p.m. at the municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Other representatives of the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce and the downtown merchants' association also are expected to attend the meeting.

Both groups oppose a plan recommended by the engineering firm of Metcalf & Eddy Inc., of Des Plaines, to have Arlington Heights Road run under the railway tracks with Northwest Highway also depressed to the same level as Arlington Heights Road.

THE CHAMBER also is passing petitions opposing the underpass and has asked for additional economic impact and traffic studies.

The village board, however, is tentatively scheduled to discuss the underpass proposal Oct. 17 and possibly decide then whether to proceed with the project.

The plan recommended by Metcalf & Eddy was given a cost estimate in 1975 of $5.7 million. The village wants 70 per cent financing from the federal government.

MOST OF THE opposition stems from the plan to lower Northwest Highway because it will cause the closing of the Evergreen Avenue railroad crossing and eliminate several businesses' frontage on Northwest Highway.

Opponents of the under pass plan include four financial institutions: First Arlington National Bank, Arling-

Home gets more aid than most

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

NORMAL — A little-used foster home here receives three times more state aid per child than Maryville Academy, Des Plaines, or other comparable foster homes, a Daily Herald investigation shows.

The Illinois Soldiers and Sailors Children's Home in Normal received $2.1 million in state aid in 1976 for 60 children, an average of $35,000 per child.

At Maryville, where there are about 150 foster children, the average state payment was only $10,300.

State Rep. Pete Peters, R-Chicago, has called for the closing of the Soldiers and Sailors home, saying it cannot be justified on either an economical or program basis.

THE ILLINOIS Dept. of Children and Family Services is reportedly studying the home. But state officials so far have been unable to justify fully the higher expenditures.

"I can't understand it. I question why we spent $1.5 million on salaries there last year," said Peters, who is the Republican spokesman on the Illinois House appropriations committee.

State records show there were 157 employes and 131 students at the Soldiers and Sailors home in 1974. This June, there were still 113 state employes even though the number of children being cared for had dropped to about 60.

Medical costs at the school included $52,000 for a part-time doctor and two registered nurses, even though serious injuries and surgical cases are treated at local hospitals.

STATE OFFICIALS offer conflicting explanations for the high cost of the Soldiers and Sailors home and Edward E. Schweinberg, assistant superintendent at the home, insists the expenditures are justified.

At Maryville, Father John Smyth, administrator, said operations could be vastly improved if state wards there received the same aid given to the residents at the Soldiers and Sailors home.

"We have always asked why they get more than we do, but we are told it is a state institution and (the cost) does not count," Smyth said.

State payments cover only 80 per cent of the cost of caring for children at Maryville. Other funds for the school come from Catholic charities

Congress plan adds $300 to upper income tax bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new congressional proposal, announced Sunday, would add more than $300 to the income tax bill of a homeowner who earns $30,000 to $50,000 per year.

Homeowners with lesser incomes would benefit from the plan.

The proposal would replace tax deductions for mortgage interest and property taxes with a 20 per cent tax credit intended to encourage more home ownership by inner city residents.

Under the plan, a homeowner still would figure his mortgage interest and property taxes but instead of using them as a tax deduction, he would take 20 per cent of what he paid in interest and taxes and subtract that from his federal tax bill.

A report on the proposal was released by Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee.

"NO ONE EVER deliberately designed tax policy to favor suburban development at the expense of central cities, but it has worked out that way," Reuss said. "The administration and Congress should take a careful look at the urban impact of tax revision proposals."

The report was prepared by the committee's subcommittee on the city, which also is headed by Reuss.

The report said various existing tax provisions, including mortgage interest and property tax deductions and real estate tax shelters, had favored new suburban construction over rehabilitation of inner cities.

The subcommittee said replacing interest and property tax deductions with a 20 per cent credit would provide the Treasury with the same revenues but reduce taxes for home owners with an income of $10,000 to $15,000 by an average of $215.

THOSE WITH an income of $20,000 to $30,000 per year would have their income tax reduced by an average of $19, the report said.

It said the increase for a homeowner in the $30,000 to $50,000 bracket would average $324.

Rep. Richard Kelly, R-Fla., the ranking GOP member of the subcommittee, opposed the proposed change in tax policy.

Kelly said replacing the deduction with a tax credit would "impose serious hardships" on many families "without predictably improving" the chances of the urban poor to buy houses.

He said one result might simply be a reduction in the number of houses being built.

"The American people should never tolerate government making decisions about the kind of homes they live in," he said.

This sample score chart for Dist. 54's achievement test shows a portion of the objectives, and how well students have mastered them, for the third grade language arts test. An "X" indicates a student has mastered the skill. Student "John" obviously has retained more skills than student "Liz." A percentile score of 96 means a student did as well as or better than 96 per cent of the Dist. 54 third graders. The two columns of figures at the right show how well students in the class measure up against the rest of the district.

by HOLLY HANSON

The third-grader's mother gazed in bewilderment at her child's achievement test scores: Reading, 88th percentile, vocabulary, 84th percentile, math, 67th percentile.

The concerned mother called her child's teacher to get an explanation of the low math score.

"What areas does my child need help in? she asked. "Fractions? Multiplication? Subtraction?"

The teacher didn't know.

"All I can tell you about this test," the teacher said, "is that your child did as well as or better than 67 per cent of the third graders in the United States."

Parents faced with this annual array of numbers, meant to explain their children's academic progress, understand the mother's frustration.

IT IS A FEELING shared by school administrators and teachers, who know some children have not learned all the basic skills, but cannot pinpoint those lapses on standardized achievement tests.

The answer to this dilemma seems simple: find a better test, one that will show parents and educators where each child stands on knowing the basic skills for his grade.

It definitely wasn't a simple process, but with a $20,000 federal grant and after three years of work, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 has come up with a new kind of skills test that now serves as a model for school districts across the country.

Put together by Dist. 54 teachers under the direction of testing coordinator Joseph Cech, this test spells out in specific form which skills each child has mastered and which need improvement. It also gives teachers a good look at how successful their teaching methods are.

THE DIST. 54 TEST, measuring math and language arts skills, is a movement away from the much-criticized standardized tests that many parents have long taken as the final word on how well their child is doing in school.

The controversy over standardized tests like the Iowa test of Basic Skills taken by many Northwest suburban children heats up more and more as test scores decline from year to year.

Parents insist the scores show that teachers aren't teaching and children aren't learning, while school officials condemn the tests for not measuring what each district teaches and for not specifying what skills a child doesn't know.

Cech says those criticisms led Dist. 54 to try to develop a better test.

"WE DISCONTINUED the Iowa Test of Basic Skills because some areas were not indicative of what we were trying to accomplish," Cech said. "We don'e necessarily teach some things at the same grade level the Iowa Test tests them. We needed a test that measured what we were trying to teach, not what someone else was trying to test."

Cech said Dist. 54 administrators were dissatisfied with the Iowa Test's method of scoring, which lists a percentile score, indicating only how well a child did in comparison with a national group.

For example, a score of 75 shows a student did as well as or better than 75 per cent of the children nationally, but it does not tell whether the child did an average job on most test items or did spectacularly well on some and dismally on others.

DIST. 54, however, still gives a minimal amount of students standarized tests to maintain some idea of how its students compare to the rest of the country.

But Cech said the new skills test appears to have had a positive effect on the standardized test scores.

Although the language arts portion of the test was given for the first time

Army losing the war on claims

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (UPI) — Army lawyer John Madden's checkbook contains some of the strangest entries that ever separated the American taxpayer from his tax dollars.

Take the prize-winning bull from Bavaria. Allegedly frightened by a low-flying helicopter, he muffed a clean jump over a barbed wire fence, thus damaging important parts of his anatomy. Madden's office paid about $1,200 at current exchange rates after expert witnesses testified the bull couldn't sire any more calves.

"I call it a hidden cost of defense," said Madden, who is in charge of paying damage claims. It is big business in West Germany. This year he will shell out about $17 million in some 40,000 cases to account for roughly half the Army's budget for damages worldwide.

Most cases Madden's office handles are mundane traffic accidents and damage to crops or roads, but these can take a bizarre twist.

LIKE THE GIS who drove their Sheridan tank into a hundreds-of-years-old church in the town of Roth in 1974. The Army eventually settled for $640, but only a after a three-star general and his staff spent a day negotiating the release of the crew, held hostage by angry town residents who surrounded the tank.

Last year a tank crew tried to get across a Roman bridge that was too narrow in the town of Ingolstadt and lopped off the parapets on each side. The town has claimed $69,000 for restoration of the ancient span. Madden still is haggling over that one.

The reason the number and value of claims in Germany goes so high is the large number of U.S. soldiers stationed there — about 190,000 — and because many training maneuvers have to take place on private land because of lack of space.

MADDEN, 29, an Army captain from Los Altos, Calif., said he does more than "follow the troops around with a checkbook," however, and looks on doubtful claims with a jaundiced eye. The West German government investigates each case and also has reason to keep costs down because it pays 25 per cent of each tab.

But the lawyer agrees that Uncle Sam can get taken. "It's a little bit like the auto accident claimant back home who gets a new case of whiplash every year," he said.

The Army paid $216 to the owner of a fish hatchery who claimed a tank company which bivouacked nearby had helped themselves to trout from one of his ponds. When Madden's office demanded proof the claimant showed investigators the remains of campfires and 200 fishheads and sets of entrails.

But the Army refused to pay a German who claimed seven of his 75 rare Australian parakeets had died as the result of noise from aircraft and demanded $6,090 for th casualties.

"As my own taxes go up I get tighter with my bucks," said Madden.

Man dies after 3-vehicle accident

A Hanover Park man died Sunday of injuries he suffered in a three-vehicle accident Saturday morning in the 1700 block of Rohlwing Road, Rolling Meadows.

Sam Westphal, 25, died in Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

The accident occurred when Westphal's car, northbound on Rohlwing Road, passed a horse van on the right, police said. Once Westphal completed the pass, his car returned to center northbound lane, but overshot, entering the southbound lane on Rohlwing Road and into the path of a garbage truck, police said.

The left fender of the van was hit by the car. The driver of the van, who is unidentified, was not injured.

The driver of the truck, Roland Meyer Jr., of Rolling Meadows, also was not injured.

No tickets were issued.

Westphal was a former resident of Rolling Meadows and an employe of Rolling Meadows pharmaceutical firm.

Mothers-in-law may get their day from Congress

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On Oct. 23, if all goes as planned, the United States will celebrate National Mothers-In-Law Day.

Or perhaps "celebrate" is too strong a verb.

Apart from its sponsor, the National Mothers-In-Law Council of New York, participation apparently will be somewhat restrained.

It is true that Mothers-In-Law Day is listed in the 1977 edition of Chases' Calendar of Annual Events, the country's best known compilation of holidays, commemorations, lunar eclipses, anniversaries, asparagus festivals, etc.

Nevertheless, it likely will be overshadowed by such other Oct. 23 activities as the beginning of National Cleaner Air Week and the swallows leaving Capistrana.

ONE REASON only a minimal amount of jubilation and dancing in the streets is anticipated is because the occasion lacks official sanction. But that situation may change before another Mothers-In-Law Day rolls around.

It is expected that bills soon will be introduced to make the honoring of mothers-in-law an annual event by act of Congress.

Ever alert for new occasions on which floral tributes might be appropriate, Florists' Transworld Delivery discovered a distressing thing about mothers-in-law — few persons sent them flowers. At least in that capacity.

They might be smothered in posies as wives and mothers, but rarely as mothers-in-law.

CURIOUS ABOUT this, FTD took some soundings that indicated nightclub comedians to the contrary notwithstanding, most married persons felt kindly toward their spouses' maternal parent.

The next step was to circulate a questionnaire among members of Congress to locate potential sponsors of a measure to make Mothers-In-Law Day an official federal function.

Replies still are coming in but the response thus far has been encouraging. Typical congressional mother-in-law comment: "I am devoted to her." "One of my staunchest supporters." "I like her very much." "She was tops."

A spokesman said FTD believes it may be onto something big. Change the negative mother-in-law image to reflect these sentiments and the orders will roll in.

Army losing the war on claims

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (UPI) — Army lawyer John Madden's checkbook contains some of the strangest entries that ever separated the American taxpayer from his tax dollars.

Take the prize-winning bull from Bavaria. Allegedly frightened by a low-flying helicopter, he muffed a clean jump over a barbed wire fence, thus damaging important parts of his anatomy. Madden's office paid about $1,200 at current exchange rates after expert witnesses testified the bull couldn't sire any more calves.

"I call it a hidden cost of defense," said Madden, who is in charge of paying damage claims. It is big business in West Germany. This year he will shell out about $17 million in some 40,000 cases to account for roughly half the Army's budget for damages worldwide.

Most cases Madden's office handles are mundane traffic accidents and damage to crops or roads, but these can take a bizarre twist.

LIKE THE GIS who drove their Sheridan tank into a hundreds-of-years-old church in the town of Roth in 1974. The Army eventually settled for $640, but only a after a three-star general and his staff spent a day negotiating the release of the crew, held hostage by angry town residents who surrounded the tank.

Last year a tank crew tried to get across a Roman bridge that was too narrow in the town of Ingolstadt and lopped off the parapets on each side. The town has claimed $69,000 for restoration of the ancient span. Madden still is haggling over that one.

The reason the number and value of claims in Germany goes so high is the large number of U.S. soldiers stationed there — about 190,000 — and because many training maneuvers have to take place on private land because of lack of space.

MADDEN, 29, an Army captain from Los Altos, Calif., said he does more than "follow the troops around with a checkbook," however, and looks on doubtful claims with a jaundiced eye. The West German government investigates each case and also has reason to keep costs down because it pays 25 per cent of each tab.

But the lawyer agrees that Uncle Sam can get taken. "It's a little bit like the auto accident claimant back home who gets a new case of whiplash every year," he said.

The Army paid $216 to the owner of a fish hatchery who claimed a tank company which bivouacked nearby had helped themselves to trout from one of his ponds. When Madden's office demanded proof the claimant showed investigators the remains of campfires and 200 fishheads and sets of entrails.

But the Army refused to pay a German who claimed seven of his 75 rare Australian parakeets had died as the result of noise from aircraft and demanded $6,090 for th casualties.

"As my own taxes go up I get tighter with my bucks," said Madden.

Man dies after 3-vehicle accident

A Hanover Park man died Sunday of injuries he suffered in a three-vehicle accident Saturday morning in the 1700 block of Rohlwing Road, Rolling Meadows.

Sam Westphal, 25, died in Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.

The accident occurred when Westphal's car, northbound on Rohlwing Road, passed a horse van on the right, police said. Once Westphal completed the pass, his car returned to center northbound lane, but overshot, entering the southbound lane on Rohlwing Road and into the path of a garbage truck, police said.

The left fender of the van was hit by the car. The driver of the van, who is unidentified, was not injured.

The driver of the truck, Roland Meyer Jr., of Rolling Meadows, also was not injured.

No tickets were issued.

Westphal was a former resident of Rolling Meadows and an employe of Rolling Meadows pharmaceutical firm.

Israel rejects U.S.-Soviet peace push

Israel firmly rejected Sunday the U.S.-Soviet declaration on the Geneva Middle East peace conference as an attempt to pressure the Jewish state into making unacceptable concessions to the Palestinians and Arab states.

Nearly all Arab and Palestinian spokesmen welcomed the joint statement issued by Sec. of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. It was applauded also by U.M. Sec. Gen. Kurt Waldheim.

Egypt's semiofficial press, however, charged Moscow had "backed down" and made important concessions to Washington in order to save "detente" and the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

At the same time, however, official Cairo radio cautiously welcomed the statement as an "important and significant development...which means the two superpowers are determined to work jointly for realizing peace in the Middle East."

THE U.S.-SOVIET statement Saturday said a Middle East peace conference should establish the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" and "normal peaceful relations" in the region which has been divided since the Arab-Israeli war of 1948. The U. S. and Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the Geneva Middle East conference.

Israel's rejection was made by Finance Minister Simha Ehrilich, sitting in for Prime Minister Menahem Begin who was hospitalized Friday for what was described as fatigue. Doctors said the 64-year-old Begin was resting comfortably Sunday.

"The reaction is natural and understood — we reject it with both hands," Erlich said.

"The two powers are exhibiting real signs of forcing an imposed solution on us and we won't accept an imposed solution."

Asked if Israel could withstand pressure from Washington and Moscow, Ehrlich said, "I believe we have the power to stand not for a thousand years but for a reasonable period, and, of course, the people will have to go into a state of emergency in such a case."

EHRLICH SAID Israel will "in no way" accept the establishment of a Palestinian state and "in no way can we sit with the PLO" — the Palestinian Liberation Organization, which Israel refuses to regognize as spokesman for the Palestinian people.

The U.S.-Soviet statement said the Palestinians should be represented at Geneva, but it did not specify by whom.

However, even the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which has repeatedly attacked U.S. policy, voiced guarded interest in the statement's call for ensuring the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

The official PLO news agency WAFA said "the statement constitutes a constructive step toward finding a just settlement to the Middle East problem and for the first time covers the essential aspects of the crisis."

Syria's government-controlled daily Al Thawra also said the statement "covers many of the essential aspects of a just peace."

STANLEY SPRAGUE, on a bicycle trip across the United States, stopped in Arlington Heights Friday to visit his cousin, Shirley Mullally. Sprague is a retired Berkley, Calif. fireman.

Bike's eye view praised by cross-country cyclist

by KATHERINE RODEGHIER

Since Aug. 21, Stanley Sprague has been viewing America from the seat of his one-speed bicycle.

The retired fire fighter left his Berkeley Calif., home for a cross country bike hike to his daughter's home in Vermont. On Friday he stopped in Arlington Heights to pay a call on his cousin, Shirley Mullally of 1513 N. Chicago Ave.

What made him decide to travel cross-country on a bike? "This is the first time in my life that I've had any time," said Sprague who retired from the Berkeley fire department last July at the age of 50. He had been planning the trip for about six months, tuning and reconditioning his bicycle and building special racks and containers for food and supplies.

SPRAGUE BOUGHT his one-speed "beater" eight years ago for $15 and it has been a valuable means of transportation ever since. Sprague said he doesn't like those flashy, expensive ten-speeds and besides, he said, he never has to worry about anyone stealing his old, but trusty, two-wheeler.

Getting in shape for the cross-country ride wasn't much of a problem. Sprague has been running daily for about 10 years covering 3 to 8 miles a day so his daily bike rides didn't require much physical conditioning.

Sprague said he normally starts out at 8 a.m. and quits for the day around 6 p.m. to camp out or find accommodations in a motel. He averages about 70 miles in a day although he has gone as far as 100 miles at one time. For meals he pops into local grocery stores and stocks up on canned fish — tuna and sardines — bread, cereal, fresh fruits and vegetables.

GETTING OVER the mountains was somewhat of a struggle, said Sprague. There was a 13-mile stretch through Rocky Mountain National Park where he had to get off and push the bike up and down steep grades and around hairpin curves. In the desert his constant fear was a shortage of water. He traveled one 83-mile section where no water was available en route.

Sprague is most anxious to talk about the persons he has met on his journey through California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. The trip has been "a very heartwarming experience" he said. "Everyone has been very pleasant and helpful and interested," he said.

A man who ran a machine shop in Utah took time out from a busy work load to help Sprague repair a broken rack support, and a woman in Nebraska opened her hardware store on a Sunday so he could buy new bearings and other parts for the bike. In Iowa, a man bounded across the road toward him and handed him an apple.

SPRAGUE BELIEVES he will arrive in Vermont in about three weeks. Weather so far has been good, he said, although Saturday's wind and drizzle in Arlington Heights put a damper on things. Wind, especially a side wind, can be dangerous in traffic, but Sprague said he really doesn't mind rain or thunderstorms. "The thunderstorms in the desert were delightful," he said.

The benefit of traveling the country on a bike is the ability to see nature up close. You aren't secluded from it as you are in a car or a jet, said Sprague. People should travel "in a more leisurely atmosphere than racing along in an airplane or an automobile."

One morning, for example, Sprague broke camp and started off for another day's ride. Suddenly he heard the trumpeting of an elk in the distance, a sound he says he never would have heard if he were enclosed in a car.

Bicycling, he said, "is the only way to see the country."

Full agenda as high court opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the formal opening of its 1977-78 term today, the Supreme Court starts two weeks of arguments on issues such as mandatory retirement, the sick leave rights of pregnant women and the much-discussed test of "reverse discrimination."

Only brief preliminaries follow the traditional "oyez, oyez" by Marshall Albert Wong as the nine black-robed justices emerge once more from behind the heavy red draperies and take their places at the high mahogany bench.

First there is admission of a few attorneys to practice. Then Chief Justice Warren Burger announces the court's orders are available in the clerk's office.

His words are meaningless to the hushed spectators in the marble-columned chamber but they release to reporters and the public the justices' disposition of hundreds of appeals that have piled up during the summer recess.

USUALLY A SCORE or so of the perhaps 800 cases on the list are accepted for argument and written opinion. The remainder stand on judgements of lower courts.

Cases to be argued in the October sessions were carried over from the term that ended June 29.

The lawsuit challenging mandatory retirement was filed by a former United Air Lines employe, Harris McMann, who was retired against his will at age 60 under a company plan in existence since 1941.

The 1967 Age Discrimination in Employment Act forbids discrimination against persons between 40 and 65 but allows for carrying out "bona fide" pension plans. United said its long-standing plan could not be violating a law so recently enacted. But the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said early retirements must have an economic or business purpose and not rest on age alone, regardless of when it originated.

Sick pay for workers on maternity leave is at issue in cases appealed by the Nashville (Tenn.) Gas Co. and the Richmond (Calif.l School District. In the gas company certain seniority rights cases also are at stake.

THE CASES follow the much-publicized 1976 General Electric decision that employers could exclude pregnancy from their disability insurance plans without violating federal law. The Senate has passed and sent to the House a bill to overcome the effect of this ruling.

In the Richmond and Nashville situations employes were allowed sick leave but no insurance plan was involved. The women who sued won in lower federal courts.

The reverse discrimination suit originally brought by Allan Bakke, a twice-rejected white applicant to the University of California Medical School at Davis, comes up Oct. 12. The lawyer for the university is Archibald Cox, Harvard professor and former U.S. solicitor general, who was fired by Richard Nixon as special prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up investigation.

Bakke, who is represented by San Francisco attorney Reynold Colvin, said he was prevented from getting a medical education because the university reserved 16 of its 100 first-year places for disadvantaged minorities.

Church, medical, legal and ethnic groups have filed such a wealth of material pro and con that a justice would need a strong passion for homework to get through all of it.

The Carter administration urged the court to find racial considerations permissible in an admissions program and intimated opposition to quotas.

Rules provide Catch-22 as Senate tempers flair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's Rule 22, which provides a means of shutting off filibusters, has become a Catch-22 in the natural gas pricing debate.

The rule was invoked last Monday and that meant senators only could talk on the issue for one hour. Long-winded orations, the cornerstone of most filibusters, were out.

But senators trying to avoid a vote on the basic issue in tht natural gas fight — whether to maintain or eliminate federal price controls — found a way to continue their filibuster. They did so by introducing amendment after amendment from a reservoir of more than 500, thereby stalling action through endless roll calls and quorum calls.

SENATE LEADERS tried frantically to end the process — but the rules worked against them.

Almost everyone agrees the rules need changing, but the Senate is reluctant to change. When it recessed Saturday, Democratic leader Robert Byrd warned, "If we're not careful we may set some precedents that will come back to haunt us."

Republican leader Howard Baker had second thoughts about having opposed Byrd's unsuccessful attempt early this year to change Rule 22 and put a flat 50-hour limit — including roll calls — on debate after cloture is voted.

"I'm not so sure I was right at that time," Baker said. "We've been mesmerized by our rules."

BYRD, THE legislative master, admitted, "I've never run up against anything like this."

The parliamentary thicket during Saturday's six hours of debate belied the standard advice given to tourists that they will be bored by watching the Senate. Passions rivaled those evoked by a television college football game being watched on the sly in cloakrooms.

Bellicose demands for recognition and points of order drained the Senate's reservoir of civility:

• A plea by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., for consideration of his compromise plan was doomed simply because it was a "substitute" amendment instead of a "perfecting" amendment and thus out of order.

• Byrd tried, then dropped, a motion to recess the Senate early because "tempers are too high."

• Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., pleaded to "end this law of the jungle."

• Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska threatened to make life miserable for Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, for having called up another senator's amendments while the author was out of town.

• Sen. John Melcher, presiding over the Senate, ruled an amendment was dilatory and therefore out of order, then amazed his colleagues by ruling an appeal of that decision was out of order.

• Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, shouted that Melcher's action, if allowed to stand as precedent, would render senators "powerless, powerless," which is what they have been in the face of a filibuster for more than a week.

$5 fee on oil imports likely: Schlesinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Sec. James Schlesinger said Sunday it is likely President Carter will impose a $5 per barrel fee on imported oil if Congress fails to approve his plan for increasing taxes on domestically produced crude oil.

Either tax, Schlesinger said, probably would raise gasoline prices for consumers 5 to 7 cents per gallon.

If Congress does not approve the crude oil tax, he said, Carter could impose a $5 per barrel tax on oil imports without approval from Capitol Hill.

"THE PRESIDENT is prepared, I think, if the necessity arises to impose those fees . . . we are not in a position where we are dependent on Senate action," Schlesinger said.

"I think that he is prepared to consider that action and it is likely we would do so at some point. How quickly, I don't know."

Schlesinger, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" program, said a tax on oil imports would be aimed at getting industries to switch to coal. One major disadvantage, he said, would be continuation of the entitlement program, under which oil refiners whose main source is cheap domestic oil make compensating payments to refiners who are chiefly dependent on more expensive foreign oil.

THE CRUDE OIL, considered the centerpiece of Carter's energy program, is designed to raise the cost of American-produced oil — now selling as low as $5.25 per barrel — to the world level of $14.

That tax would raise billions of dollars in new revenues and Carter proposed rebating that money to consumers.

The House approved the tax, but the Senate Finance Committee voted it down last week and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., predicted Sunday it will have a rough time on the Senate floor.

"I think the crude oil tax is in deep trouble in the Senate," he said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press" program.

"The fight will be over how do we spend the money. Anytime you can get $12 billion or $15 billion in a pot before the Senate, you'll get 12 or 15 suggestions as to how it should be spent. The tax is not so much the problem as is how it will be spent and for what purpose."

Jackson said the threat of a tax on imported oil gives the administration "substantial" leverage and "that could be the twister, so to speak, to force Congress to move around."

Israel rejects U.S.-Soviet peace push

Israel firmly rejected Sunday the U.S.-Soviet declaration on the Geneva Middle East peace conference as an attempt to pressure the Jewish state into making unacceptable concessions to the Palestinians and Arab states.

Nearly all Arab and Palestinian spokesmen welcomed the joint statement issued by Sec. of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. It was applauded also by U.M. Sec. Gen. Kurt Waldheim.

Egypt's semiofficial press, however, charged Moscow had "backed down" and made important concessions to Washington in order to save "detente" and the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

At the same time, however, official Cairo radio cautiously welcomed the statement as an "important and significant development...which means the two superpowers are determined to work jointly for realizing peace in the Middle East."

THE U.S.-SOVIET statement Saturday said a Middle East peace conference should establish the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" and "normal peaceful relations" in the region which has been divided since the Arab-Israeli war of 1948. The U. S. and Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the Geneva Middle East conference.

Israel's rejection was made by Finance Minister Simha Ehrilich, sitting in for Prime Minister Menahem Begin who was hospitalized Friday for what was described as fatigue. Doctors said the 64-year-old Begin was resting comfortably Sunday.

"The reaction is natural and understood — we reject it with both hands," Erlich said.

"The two powers are exhibiting real signs of forcing an imposed solution on us and we won't accept an imposed solution."

Asked if Israel could withstand pressure from Washington and Moscow, Ehrlich said, "I believe we have the power to stand not for a thousand years but for a reasonable period, and, of course, the people will have to go into a state of emergency in such a case."

EHRLICH SAID Israel will "in no way" accept the establishment of a Palestinian state and "in no way can we sit with the PLO" — the Palestinian Liberation Organization, which Israel refuses to regognize as spokesman for the Palestinian people.

The U.S.-Soviet statement said the Palestinians should be represented at Geneva, but it did not specify by whom.

However, even the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which has repeatedly attacked U.S. policy, voiced guarded interest in the statement's call for ensuring the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

The official PLO news agency WAFA said "the statement constitutes a constructive step toward finding a just settlement to the Middle East problem and for the first time covers the essential aspects of the crisis."

Syria's government-controlled daily Al Thawra also said the statement "covers many of the essential aspects of a just peace."

STANLEY SPRAGUE, on a bicycle trip across the United States, stopped in Arlington Heights Friday to visit his cousin, Shirley Mullally. Sprague is a retired Berkley, Calif. fireman.

Bike's eye view praised by cross-country cyclist

by KATHERINE RODEGHIER

Since Aug. 21, Stanley Sprague has been viewing America from the seat of his one-speed bicycle.

The retired fire fighter left his Berkeley Calif., home for a cross country bike hike to his daughter's home in Vermont. On Friday he stopped in Arlington Heights to pay a call on his cousin, Shirley Mullally of 1513 N. Chicago Ave.

What made him decide to travel cross-country on a bike? "This is the first time in my life that I've had any time," said Sprague who retired from the Berkeley fire department last July at the age of 50. He had been planning the trip for about six months, tuning and reconditioning his bicycle and building special racks and containers for food and supplies.

SPRAGUE BOUGHT his one-speed "beater" eight years ago for $15 and it has been a valuable means of transportation ever since. Sprague said he doesn't like those flashy, expensive ten-speeds and besides, he said, he never has to worry about anyone stealing his old, but trusty, two-wheeler.

Getting in shape for the cross-country ride wasn't much of a problem. Sprague has been running daily for about 10 years covering 3 to 8 miles a day so his daily bike rides didn't require much physical conditioning.

Sprague said he normally starts out at 8 a.m. and quits for the day around 6 p.m. to camp out or find accommodations in a motel. He averages about 70 miles in a day although he has gone as far as 100 miles at one time. For meals he pops into local grocery stores and stocks up on canned fish — tuna and sardines — bread, cereal, fresh fruits and vegetables.

GETTING OVER the mountains was somewhat of a struggle, said Sprague. There was a 13-mile stretch through Rocky Mountain National Park where he had to get off and push the bike up and down steep grades and around hairpin curves. In the desert his constant fear was a shortage of water. He traveled one 83-mile section where no water was available en route.

Sprague is most anxious to talk about the persons he has met on his journey through California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois. The trip has been "a very heartwarming experience" he said. "Everyone has been very pleasant and helpful and interested," he said.

A man who ran a machine shop in Utah took time out from a busy work load to help Sprague repair a broken rack support, and a woman in Nebraska opened her hardware store on a Sunday so he could buy new bearings and other parts for the bike. In Iowa, a man bounded across the road toward him and handed him an apple.

SPRAGUE BELIEVES he will arrive in Vermont in about three weeks. Weather so far has been good, he said, although Saturday's wind and drizzle in Arlington Heights put a damper on things. Wind, especially a side wind, can be dangerous in traffic, but Sprague said he really doesn't mind rain or thunderstorms. "The thunderstorms in the desert were delightful," he said.

The benefit of traveling the country on a bike is the ability to see nature up close. You aren't secluded from it as you are in a car or a jet, said Sprague. People should travel "in a more leisurely atmosphere than racing along in an airplane or an automobile."

One morning, for example, Sprague broke camp and started off for another day's ride. Suddenly he heard the trumpeting of an elk in the distance, a sound he says he never would have heard if he were enclosed in a car.

Bicycling, he said, "is the only way to see the country."

Full agenda as high court opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the formal opening of its 1977-78 term today, the Supreme Court starts two weeks of arguments on issues such as mandatory retirement, the sick leave rights of pregnant women and the much-discussed test of "reverse discrimination."

Only brief preliminaries follow the traditional "oyez, oyez" by Marshall Albert Wong as the nine black-robed justices emerge once more from behind the heavy red draperies and take their places at the high mahogany bench.

First there is admission of a few attorneys to practice. Then Chief Justice Warren Burger announces the court's orders are available in the clerk's office.

His words are meaningless to the hushed spectators in the marble-columned chamber but they release to reporters and the public the justices' disposition of hundreds of appeals that have piled up during the summer recess.

USUALLY A SCORE or so of the perhaps 800 cases on the list are accepted for argument and written opinion. The remainder stand on judgements of lower courts.

Cases to be argued in the October sessions were carried over from the term that ended June 29.

The lawsuit challenging mandatory retirement was filed by a former United Air Lines employe, Harris McMann, who was retired against his will at age 60 under a company plan in existence since 1941.

The 1967 Age Discrimination in Employment Act forbids discrimination against persons between 40 and 65 but allows for carrying out "bona fide" pension plans. United said its long-standing plan could not be violating a law so recently enacted. But the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said early retirements must have an economic or business purpose and not rest on age alone, regardless of when it originated.

Sick pay for workers on maternity leave is at issue in cases appealed by the Nashville (Tenn.) Gas Co. and the Richmond (Calif.l School District. In the gas company certain seniority rights cases also are at stake.

THE CASES follow the much-publicized 1976 General Electric decision that employers could exclude pregnancy from their disability insurance plans without violating federal law. The Senate has passed and sent to the House a bill to overcome the effect of this ruling.

In the Richmond and Nashville situations employes were allowed sick leave but no insurance plan was involved. The women who sued won in lower federal courts.

The reverse discrimination suit originally brought by Allan Bakke, a twice-rejected white applicant to the University of California Medical School at Davis, comes up Oct. 12. The lawyer for the university is Archibald Cox, Harvard professor and former U.S. solicitor general, who was fired by Richard Nixon as special prosecutor in the Watergate cover-up investigation.

Bakke, who is represented by San Francisco attorney Reynold Colvin, said he was prevented from getting a medical education because the university reserved 16 of its 100 first-year places for disadvantaged minorities.

Church, medical, legal and ethnic groups have filed such a wealth of material pro and con that a justice would need a strong passion for homework to get through all of it.

The Carter administration urged the court to find racial considerations permissible in an admissions program and intimated opposition to quotas.

Rules provide Catch-22 as Senate tempers flair

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate's Rule 22, which provides a means of shutting off filibusters, has become a Catch-22 in the natural gas pricing debate.

The rule was invoked last Monday and that meant senators only could talk on the issue for one hour. Long-winded orations, the cornerstone of most filibusters, were out.

But senators trying to avoid a vote on the basic issue in tht natural gas fight — whether to maintain or eliminate federal price controls — found a way to continue their filibuster. They did so by introducing amendment after amendment from a reservoir of more than 500, thereby stalling action through endless roll calls and quorum calls.

SENATE LEADERS tried frantically to end the process — but the rules worked against them.

Almost everyone agrees the rules need changing, but the Senate is reluctant to change. When it recessed Saturday, Democratic leader Robert Byrd warned, "If we're not careful we may set some precedents that will come back to haunt us."

Republican leader Howard Baker had second thoughts about having opposed Byrd's unsuccessful attempt early this year to change Rule 22 and put a flat 50-hour limit — including roll calls — on debate after cloture is voted.

"I'm not so sure I was right at that time," Baker said. "We've been mesmerized by our rules."

BYRD, THE legislative master, admitted, "I've never run up against anything like this."

The parliamentary thicket during Saturday's six hours of debate belied the standard advice given to tourists that they will be bored by watching the Senate. Passions rivaled those evoked by a television college football game being watched on the sly in cloakrooms.

Bellicose demands for recognition and points of order drained the Senate's reservoir of civility:

• A plea by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., for consideration of his compromise plan was doomed simply because it was a "substitute" amendment instead of a "perfecting" amendment and thus out of order.

• Byrd tried, then dropped, a motion to recess the Senate early because "tempers are too high."

• Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., pleaded to "end this law of the jungle."

• Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska threatened to make life miserable for Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, for having called up another senator's amendments while the author was out of town.

• Sen. John Melcher, presiding over the Senate, ruled an amendment was dilatory and therefore out of order, then amazed his colleagues by ruling an appeal of that decision was out of order.

• Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, shouted that Melcher's action, if allowed to stand as precedent, would render senators "powerless, powerless," which is what they have been in the face of a filibuster for more than a week.

$5 fee on oil imports likely: Schlesinger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Sec. James Schlesinger said Sunday it is likely President Carter will impose a $5 per barrel fee on imported oil if Congress fails to approve his plan for increasing taxes on domestically produced crude oil.

Either tax, Schlesinger said, probably would raise gasoline prices for consumers 5 to 7 cents per gallon.

If Congress does not approve the crude oil tax, he said, Carter could impose a $5 per barrel tax on oil imports without approval from Capitol Hill.

"THE PRESIDENT is prepared, I think, if the necessity arises to impose those fees . . . we are not in a position where we are dependent on Senate action," Schlesinger said.

"I think that he is prepared to consider that action and it is likely we would do so at some point. How quickly, I don't know."

Schlesinger, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" program, said a tax on oil imports would be aimed at getting industries to switch to coal. One major disadvantage, he said, would be continuation of the entitlement program, under which oil refiners whose main source is cheap domestic oil make compensating payments to refiners who are chiefly dependent on more expensive foreign oil.

Jackson said the threat of a tax on imported oil gives the administration "substantial" leverage and "that could be the twister, so to speak, to force Congress to move around."

and donations.

THE SOLDIERS AND Sailors home was established 112 years ago on a 170-acre campus as a home for veterans' orphans. Records show that more than 400 children were housed there at one time. But enrollment has declined in recent years.

Now most of the 51 buildings are shuttered. An Illinois State University agriculture program takes up 110 acres of the campus located on the outskirts of this central Illinois community 140 miles southwest of Chicago.

Most of the students are housed in two modern dormitories built in 1969. Two students share each bedroom. There are group dining and recreation areas in each section of the three-wing dorms.

A separate cafeteria, school, gymnasium, swimming pool and administration building also are maintained.

ONE DEPARTMENT of Children and Family Services official said students at the Soldiers and Sailors home are "the most difficult in the state system," which oversees more than 25,000 students, and that disciplinary and emotional problems account for part of the home's high cost.

But Schweinberg disagrees. "A number of the students are from foster home situations, but I certainly would not say they are most difficult,'" he said. Other persons involved in foster care facilities in Illinois tended to agree with Schweinberg.

The home's admission policy was changed several years ago to allow any ward of the state admittance, and now only about 60 per cent of the students are orphans of servicemen.

But there is no formal referral process to send new children to the home, and veterans' children still have priority admittance.

THE STATE ALSO spends nearly 50 per cent more money to educate children at the Soldiers and Sailors Home than for the education of children at other homes, records indicate.

Children were educated at the Soldiers and Sailors home last year at a cost of $135,000 in teachers' salaries.

Wards at other homes attend school in the local school district, which is reimbursed an average of $1,604 per student annually.

If the per capita reimbursement were applied at the Soldiers and Sailors home, the payment to normal schools would be about $91,400, instead of the $135,000 cost of salaries for teachers on the campus.

Officials deny that the Soldiers and Sailors home caters to white foster children while minority children are sent to other homes that receive less assistance.

TWELVE PER CENT of the enrollment at the Soldiers and Sailors home is black, Schweinberg said. Statistics for other foster care facilities around the state show an average minority population three times higher.

State officials say they want to reduce the high per capita cost of operating the Soldiers and Sailors home by increasing enrollment.

While per-student costs would decrease if enrollment rose, the state would still spend about $18,000 per child — nearly 80 per cent more than it spends at Maryville, even if the maximum capacity of 115 students was attained.

Complaints about the high cost of the Soldiers and Sailors home have surfaced before. But the General Assembly has never moved to close it.

Schweinberg said he and other school officials are "concerned" about Peters' suggestion that the facility ought to be closed.

"We think we have an important job here. We hope that after the time the students spend here, they go back into society and learn to live like others," he said.

Tooling procedures the most intricate work.

Chips off block tell wood's secret

by DEBBE JONAK

Clarence Marshall does not consider himself an artist. Not even a craftsman. Just a handyman who happens to use wood as his tool.

"I guess I got it from my father. He was a handyman. He did plumbing and electrical things. Painting. Anything a man does around the house," the 80-year-old Mount Prospect resident said.

Marshall does woodwork around his house. Exacting, intricate, perfect and artistic woodwork — or handiwork, as he insists.

A COFFEE table with hundreds of pieces of ingrained wood. Lamps, trays, bookshelves. Vases with elaborate Roman scenes chipped from the curves. A grandfather clock, a cookie jar, nutbowls and salad bowls.

"I like to work with wood," Marshall said. "It's pretty hard to explain my feelings, what makes me do these things. But if I see something I think I can make just as good or better, I'll try it."

The tools of a handyman.

Much of Marshall's work, which has been displayed at area libraries, is inspired by pictures in Popular Mechanics or Popular Science magazines. Sometimes a newspaper photograph will send him to his sketch pad.

Then begins the sawing, tooling and hammering in a sawdust-blanketed corner of his basement.

FROM INCEPTION to finish, a project often takes weeks and months — Marshall is not a man who can be rushed.

That is why he says he will not work for commission.

"Then people are always hurrying you to finish," he said.

Some of his projects, such as a table top and his many lazy susans, involve the tedious gluing of tiny pieces of wood into a pattern or shape. The end product is a type of wood mosaic.

On other projects, such as his vaces, he traces a picture onto the wood, then chisels around it with small hand-made tools until it is reproduced three-dimensionally.

"Sometimes I smile a little down here. Sometimes I cuss a lot," said Marshall, as he stood in front of his latest project clamped between the jaws of a lathe.

HIS WIFE gone now — she died in 1966 — and retired for 15 years, Marshall finds more time to spend down in his workshop than when he first began fiddling with wood. He works out of his home at 1761 Tano Ln., Mount Prospect.

"First I started making lamps, about 35-40 years ago. And I just sort of worked into the rest of it from there," he said.

"I didn't spend much time then. Only on weekends when I first started. And only then when my wife didn't have some place she wanted to go," he said. "Now that I'm alone I have more time on my hands."

Marshall picked up his chisel and slowly began sculpting a lamp out of a long wood block.

Time is what a handyman-carver needs — that and patience, he said.

Rolling Meadows' homecoming activities begin today

Homecoming festivities begin today at Rolling Meadows High School, 2901 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows, with students participating in a lemon peeling contest.

Each day of the week will have a theme and a contest. The theme for today is America day; Tuesday is country day and a licorice eating contest is planned; Wednesday's spirit day will feature a marshmallow stuffing contest; relay races will be on T-shirt day Thursday; and pride day Friday will feature a mummy wrap.

The homecoming king and queen will be crowned at 1:30 p.m. Friday followed by a parade at 2:30 p.m.

King candidates are Jeff Corrado, Tom Simon, Bill Collins, Tom Waldron, Scott Drain and Kent Walker.

Queen candidates are Debbie Shaw, Sandy Kundanis, Diane Hyneman, Darlene Ewald, Laurie Asbury and Barb Roels.

FRIDAY night's homecoming football game will pit the Rolling Meadows Mustangs against the Hoffman Estates Hawks.

Sophomores play at 6 p.m. followed by the varsity at 8 p.m.

Between games the king and queen will be presented along with the floats. The Indiana University Marching Band will perform between games and during half-time of the varsity game.

'Knight,' day events mark homecoming

"Oh What a Knight" is the theme for Prospect High School's 1977 homecoming which kicks off today with a smile contest during lunch at the school, 801 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

Tuesday is bandana day which features a beer drinking contest in the cafeteria — with root beer, of course.

Students will come to school in their grubby clothes Wednesday and participate in a "marathon" candy bar eating contest. Thursday is T-shirt day and tricycle races will be conducted during lunch.

THE MAJOR festivities will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday when the "Knighttimes" parade steps off at Owens Park and proceeds along Busse Road to Wille Street to Highland Street to the school. Special parade guests will be High School Dist. 214 Supt. Edward Gilbert and Mount Prospect Village Pres. Carolyn Krause.

A pep rally on the school's football field follows the parade at 8:15 p.m. From there, students will attend a coke dance in the girls' gym from 8:45 to 10 p.m.

In addition to the opposition expressed at a public hearing on the underpass proposal Sept. 20, 14 letters of opposition have been submitted to village officials. Several were sent by businessmen who object to proposed detour routes, but two said the underpass proposal will put them out of business.

"THIS ACTION would put us, as well as many other merchants in town, out of business," said the letter written by Paul W. Smith of MPS Office Machines, 10 E. Northwest Hwy.

"If the proposed underpass goes through it will definitely put us out of business," said the letter written by Leonard Reckwerdt of Arlington Jewelers, 110 N. Evergreen Ave.

Two homeowners also submitted letters of opposition.

"We object because we moved to Arlington Heights to get away from underpasses, retaining walls and graffiti and not to create some of the same features in this village," said Alfred E. Wolter, 516 W. Fairview St.

"Traffic will increase and will cause more backup than we presently have," said Barbara Michalik, 315 N. Salem Ave.

A petition with 34 signatures also was submitted by Ralph A. Windheim, 318 S. Evergreen Ave., in opposition to the underpass proposal.

Film seizure rates protest from resident

by DANN GIRE

In Phillip Pedersen's eyes, the City of Rolling Meadows was way out of line in closing a local theater and seizing an X-rated film Friday night.

But to Ald. Lorraine Godawa, 3rd, the city is "upholding the wishes of a large percentage of people in Rolling Meadows."

Both Pedersen and Godawa were active — but on opposite sides — in the controversy over X-rated movies this year.

Pedersen, of 2207 Grouse Ln., Rolling Meadows, said Sunday that prosecuting the Meadows Theatre, 3265 Kirchoff Rd., "could cost us a fortune" in tax money that "should be used for better things."

Police Friday confiscated the X-rated film, "Cinderella," and arrested theater manager Bill Farber, charging him for violation of the obscenity law.

PEDERSEN, WHO lives in the Meadow Edge subdivision, originally criticized the obscenity ordinance when it was passed in July. At the time, he said the city should not tell adults what they can and cannot see.

"I'm not opposed to banning obscenity for children, but the general consensus of the people who live in my neighborhood is that the ordinance is vague, ambiguous and unenforceable," he said.

Pedersen said he wouldn't mind if the Meadows showed one X-rated film every four or five weeks, "but I would object to having those films shown 52 weeks a year. I think a reasonable balance of pictures would be good."

Pedersen was a candidate for alderman in the 1st Ward last April.

But to Mrs. Godawa's way of thinking, the film seizure "was an excellent thing."

"They (the police) are upholding the wishes of a large percentage of people in Rolling Meadows," she said.

Mrs. Godawa spearheaded a three-month movement to curb pornography in the city that culminated in the passage of an obscenity ordinance July 12.

FRIDAY'S ARREST and seizure constitutes the first police action based on the new ordinance. The theater had replaced X-rated fare with PG-, and R-rated films, but returned to an X-rated film last week.

"When I heard that the theater was going to show another X-rated program, I thought to myself that it is a complete defiance to the people's wishes. I just feel we should have control over what is shown in the city. Whatever it takes to do it," she said.

Farber, the theater manager, is to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court Oct. 17 to face the obscenity charge. He was released on a $35 bond.

The Meadows Theatre now features two R-rated pictures, "The Heretic: The Exorcist Part II" and "The Twilight People."

PART OF A quarter million dollar collection of the world's most valuable limited edition collector's plates were recently moved to a new office and plate museum in Niles. Here, Diana Gordon hands guard a Rosenthal plate that sold for $60 in 1960, but valued at $1,500 today. In Diana's right hand is the first Bing and Grundhal plate produced in 1895 and sold for 50-cents. It's valued at $3,170.

Ford, Reagan unlikely candidates in 1980: Rhodes

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — House Minority Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz., says he doesn't expect former President Gerald Ford or his 1976 rival, California ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan, to seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980.

Instead, Rhodes said in an interview that he expects the GOP will see a field of newer faces competing for the presidency in three years.

"I think he'll stay active and will want to have a say in who the nominee is, but I can't see Gerald Ford running again," said Rhodes, who succeeded Ford as House Minority Leader in 1973.

The Arizona Republican also said Reagan is more likely to try to exert his influence in choosing the nominee rather than seeking the nomination for himself.

"I think Gov. Reagan is a very important figure in our party and I think he will continue to be," Rhodes said. "I don't really think he'll be a candidate."

HE PREDICTED that Reagan would continue to command a following through the conservative Citizens for the Republic group that was formed from the 1976 Citizens for Reagan organization.

Rhodes listed House Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., GOP National Chairman William Brock, former GOP chairman George Bush of Texas and former Treasury Sec. and Texas Gov. John Connally as among the potential candidates in what he called a "wide open" race for the 1980 nomination.

The House Minority Leader also said he believed next year's congressional elections represented a "crossroads" for the Republican Party, which now has only 146 of the 435 seats in the House.

"I don't believe we're going to die," said Rhodes. "This business about the death-knell of the (Republican) Party having sounded leaves me cold. But nevertheless, if we're going to increase our clout in Washington, it certainly is necessary for us to increase the numbers we have."

The nation

Campaign funds to congressmen told

Almost half the members of the House accepted 1976 campaign contributors from maritime-related unions, Common Cause reported Sunday. The government watchdog organization released the report shortly before the House votes on a controversial cargo preference bill favored by maritime interests. Common Cause said 215 congressmen accepted 1976 campaign contributons totaling $449,410 from the political committees of maritime-related unions. Among the recipients was House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., whose campaign received $7,500, Common Cause said.

Legislation scheduled for a House vote Wednesday would require 9.5 per cent of the nation's oil imports to be carried by U.S. built and registered tankers by 1980. Less than 4 per cent of the imported oil now is transported by U.S. flag ships. Shipping interests, maritime unions and the Carter administration back the measure to more than double that percentage. The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has estimated the requirement would cost consumers $610 million a year by 1985, $300 million in higher prices for imported oil and $310 million in increases caused by domestic oil prices rising to equal the cost of imported oil.

Fiery flow of lava halts abruptly

A fiery lava flow that threatened the seaside village of Kalapana, Hawaii began to cool to a harmless black rubble Sunday on the outskirts of town, slowed by a sudden halt of eruptions at Kilauea volcano. But so much lava had already oozed down the slope that civil defense officials said 120 evacuated families could not return to their homes until it was certain the flow's own momentum would not carry it over the residences. Instruments at the Hawaii Volcano Observatory indicated the mountain was quieting down. Geologists camped at the eruption site said there were no signs of the lava fountains that had shot spectacularly from Kilauea for six days. The eruptions stopped suddenly Saturday as the lava approached Kalapana. Officials estimated the lava was between a half-mile and three-quarters of a mile from the picturesque village and was moving at an almost imperceptible rate.

Rights suggestion ready soon

The White House aide charged with directing a "bold" reorganization of federal civil rights programs says he hopes to start sending recommendations to President Carter in two weeks. "We hope to come up with a system that is workable and that people can live with," said Howard Glickstein, a civil rights lawyer who heads the White House civil rights reorganization task force. Glickstein, who spent six years with the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and is now on leave of absence from Howard University Law School, said in a weekend interview that what he and his staff propose is not going to please everyone.

Glickstein said his team would focus first on the enforcement of equal employment opportunity requirements, because that area is among the most criticized and most basic of all civil rights programs. Programs affecting education, housing and other areas will be addressed later, he said.

Report Biko in coma before death

Steven Biko, the founder of South Africa's black cossciousness movement who died in a prison cell last month, was not on a hunger strike but in a coma before he died, a Johannesburg newspaper said Sunday. The Johannesburg Sunday Express, which reported the details of the 30-year-old prisoner's condition, last week said a still-unpublished preliminary post-mortem showed Biko died of brain damage, and there was evidence of chest and rib-cage injuries as well as inflammation of his kidneys. "Steve Biko was in a coma for several days before his death and was given a lumbar puncture to determine whether his brain had been injured," the Express said in its latest report. Biko's death Sept. 12 in a Pretoria prison cell started an unprecedented wave of international protest against South Africa's detention laws which empower police to detain suspects indefinitely without trial.

Film seizure rates protest from resident

by DANN GIRE

In Phillip Pedersen's eyes, the City of Rolling Meadows was way out of line in closing a local theater and seizing an X-rated film Friday night.

But to Ald. Lorraine Godawa, 3rd, the city is "upholding the wishes of a large percentage of people in Rolling Meadows."

Both Pedersen and Godawa were active — but on opposite sides — in the controversy over X-rated movies this year.

Pedersen, of 2207 Grouse Ln., Rolling Meadows, said Sunday that prosecuting the Meadows Theatre, 3265 Kirchoff Rd., "could cost us a fortune" in tax money that "should be used for better things."

Police Friday confiscated the X-rated film, "Cinderella," and arrested theater manager Bill Farber, charging him for violation of the obscenity law.

PEDERSEN, WHO lives in the Meadow Edge subdivision, originally criticized the obscenity ordinance when it was passed in July. At the time, he said the city should not tell adults what they can and cannot see.

"I'm not opposed to banning obscenity for children, but the general consensus of the people who live in my neighborhood is that the ordinance is vague, ambiguous and unenforceable," he said.

Pedersen said he wouldn't mind if the Meadows showed one X-rated film every four or five weeks, "but I would object to having those films shown 52 weeks a year. I think a reasonable balance of pictures would be good."

Pedersen was a candidate for alderman in the 1st Ward last April.

But to Mrs. Godawa's way of thinking, the film seizure "was an excellent thing."

"They (the police) are upholding the wishes of a large percentage of people in Rolling Meadows," she said.

Mrs. Godawa spearheaded a three-month movement to curb pornography in the city that culminated in the passage of an obscenity ordinance July 12.

FRIDAY'S ARREST and seizure constitutes the first police action based on the new ordinance. The theater had replaced X-rated fare with PG-, and R-rated films, but returned to an X-rated film last week.

"When I heard that the theater was going to show another X-rated program, I thought to myself that it is a complete defiance to the people's wishes. I just feel we should have control over what is shown in the city. Whatever it takes to do it," she said.

Farber, the theater manager, is to appear in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court Oct. 17 to face the obscenity charge. He was released on a $35 bond.

The Meadows Theatre now features two R-rated pictures, "The Heretic: The Exorcist Part II" and "The Twilight People."

PART OF A quarter million dollar collection of the world's most valuable limited edition collector's plates were recently moved to a new office and plate museum in Niles. Here, Diana Gordon hands guard a Rosenthal plate that sold for $60 in 1960, but valued at $1,500 today. In Diana's right hand is the first Bing and Grundhal plate produced in 1895 and sold for 50-cents. It's valued at $3,170.

Ford, Reagan unlikely candidates in 1980: Rhodes

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — House Minority Leader John Rhodes, R-Ariz., says he doesn't expect former President Gerald Ford or his 1976 rival, California ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan, to seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980.

Instead, Rhodes said in an interview that he expects the GOP will see a field of newer faces competing for the presidency in three years.

"I think he'll stay active and will want to have a say in who the nominee is, but I can't see Gerald Ford running again," said Rhodes, who succeeded Ford as House Minority Leader in 1973.

The Arizona Republican also said Reagan is more likely to try to exert his influence in choosing the nominee rather than seeking the nomination for himself.

"I think Gov. Reagan is a very important figure in our party and I think he will continue to be," Rhodes said. "I don't really think he'll be a candidate."

HE PREDICTED that Reagan would continue to command a following through the conservative Citizens for the Republic group that was formed from the 1976 Citizens for Reagan organization.

Rhodes listed House Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., GOP National Chairman William Brock, former GOP chairman George Bush of Texas and former Treasury Sec. and Texas Gov. John Connally as among the potential candidates in what he called a "wide open" race for the 1980 nomination.

The House Minority Leader also said he believed next year's congressional elections represented a "crossroads" for the Republican Party, which now has only 146 of the 435 seats in the House.

"I don't believe we're going to die," said Rhodes. "This business about the death-knell of the (Republican) Party having sounded leaves me cold. But nevertheless, if we're going to increase our clout in Washington, it certainly is necessary for us to increase the numbers we have."

Campaign funds to congressmen told

Almost half the members of the House accepted 1976 campaign contributors from maritime-related unions, Common Cause reported Sunday. The government watchdog organization released the report shortly before the House votes on a controversial cargo preference bill favored by maritime interests. Common Cause said 215 congressmen accepted 1976 campaign contributons totaling $449,410 from the political committees of maritime-related unions. Among the recipients was House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., whose campaign received $7,500, Common Cause said.

Legislation scheduled for a House vote Wednesday would require 9.5 per cent of the nation's oil imports to be carried by U.S. built and registered tankers by 1980. Less than 4 per cent of the imported oil now is transported by U.S. flag ships. Shipping interests, maritime unions and the Carter administration back the measure to more than double that percentage. The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, has estimated the requirement would cost consumers $610 million a year by 1985, $300 million in higher prices for imported oil and $310 million in increases caused by domestic oil prices rising to equal the cost of imported oil.

Fiery flow of lava halts abruptly

A fiery lava flow that threatened the seaside village of Kalapana, Hawaii began to cool to a harmless black rubble Sunday on the outskirts of town, slowed by a sudden halt of eruptions at Kilauea volcano. But so much lava had already oozed down the slope that civil defense officials said 120 evacuated families could not return to their homes until it was certain the flow's own momentum would not carry it over the residences. Instruments at the Hawaii Volcano Observatory indicated the mountain was quieting down. Geologists camped at the eruption site said there were no signs of the lava fountains that had shot spectacularly from Kilauea for six days. The eruptions stopped suddenly Saturday as the lava approached Kalapana. Officials estimated the lava was between a half-mile and three-quarters of a mile from the picturesque village and was moving at an almost imperceptible rate.

Rights suggestion ready soon

The White House aide charged with directing a "bold" reorganization of federal civil rights programs says he hopes to start sending recommendations to President Carter in two weeks. "We hope to come up with a system that is workable and that people can live with," said Howard Glickstein, a civil rights lawyer who heads the White House civil rights reorganization task force. Glickstein, who spent six years with the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights and is now on leave of absence from Howard University Law School, said in a weekend interview that what he and his staff propose is not going to please everyone.

Glickstein said his team would focus first on the enforcement of equal employment opportunity requirements, because that area is among the most criticized and most basic of all civil rights programs. Programs affecting education, housing and other areas will be addressed later, he said.

George is gone but some will never forget him

Poor George is dead.

George the champion. George, whose life was spared thanks to a last minute stay of execution by former Gov. Daniel Walker. He died of natural causes at the ripe old age of 2.

George was a lamb.

BUT NOT AN ordinary lamb. Raised on a farm in Illinois, George proved he was championship stock by taking top honors for his class at the Illinois State Fair in 1976.

Then things started to go bad for him. According to state fair regulations, all champion animals must be slaughtered and George was sold at auction to Petros Kogiones, owner of Diana's restaurant in Chicago's Greek Town. Kogiones paid $3,700 for the champ and dreamed of cooking up spectacular lamb dishes for his customers.

But Kogiones had a soft heart for the animal who took shelter in the wine cellar of the restaurant, and soon George became his pet lamb. Kogiones, along with the Save-A-Pet organization, a group opposed to the killing of animals, sought to have George exempted from state fair regulations and put on public display at Lincoln Park Zoo. Petitions with thousands of signatures from supporters of George convinced Walker to grant him a reprieve.

GEORGE WAS one of the star attractions at Lincoln Park's Farm in the Zoo until recently when he contracted a paralyzing disease and developed pneumonia. George died last week and was buried Saturday in Arrow Wood Cemetery, Mundelein. Save-A-Pet founders Gertrude Maxwell and Hannah Goldman and Save-A-Pet supporter Florence Scott gathered to mourn the animal in a special service Saturday morning.

"George is dead, but he will never be dead as a victorious champion for the rightful cause of the rights of all humane treatment for all God's creatures," said Mrs. Maxwell, reading from a prepared statement.

Plans are being made to erect a small statute of George in a grotto at the pet cemetery. Pilgrimages to the site will be conducted each Oct. 7, the birthday of St. Francis of Assisi. The first such pilgrimage will be at 10 a.m. Friday.

Inquiry in hospital patient seizure

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — Oakwood Hospital personnel, noting similarities to the 1975 poisonings at an Ann Arbor veterans hospital, Sunday investigated a complaint that a mysterious injection caused a patient to stop breathing.

The unidentified 60-year-old patient filed the complaint Saturday after his brief seizure. Hospital administrators and police were seeking the identity of an "Oriental man dressed in green medical clothing" who gave the unauthorized injection.

Another patient in the semi-private room corroborated the victim's account of the incident. Tests by the Michigan Cancer Foundation laboratory found traces of a "foreign organic substance" in the victim's urine and blood samples.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS did not say why the patient was in the hospital.

The mysterious nature of the patient's seizure prompted comparisons to the wave of breathing failures in 1975 at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital, about 30 miles west of this Detroit suburb.

More than 50 patients suffered sudden breathing failures, and a dozen died. Two Filipino nurses, Leonora Perez and Filipina Narciso, were convicted by a federal jury July 13 of five nonfatal poisonings and conspiracy.

During the trial, a witness said he saw a man in a green medical suit near at least one victim just before a seizure occurred.

"The staff's asking a lot of questions about it," said Miss Jacqueline Turlo, an Oakwood nursing supervisor. "People have mentioned that this reminded them of the VA incident and how weird that was.

"But nobody really knows what happened here. It's the first time it's happened at this hospital, and we're just watching the situation."

Security was tightened at the 595-bed hospital as administrators awaited further tests on the victim's blood and urine samples.

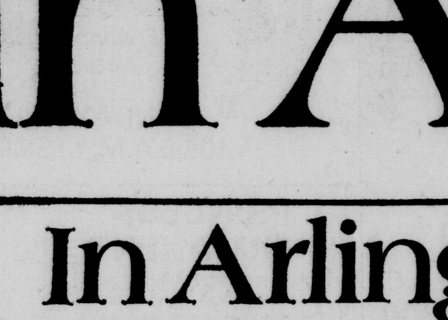
Suppose you could create your very own supermarket. What would it be like?

"Your" supermarket would be a variety of stores in one.

You'd probably start off with a wide selection of quality food, meat and produce...at consistently low prices for savings you could count on whenever you shopped.



Then you'd add a complete deli with all kinds of meats, cheeses and salads; a convenient self-serv deli so you wouldn't have to wait to be served. And you'd want fresh baked goods. So "your" store would have a unique, in-store bakery, offering a wide variety of rolls, breads and pastries all baked from scratch.

Dist. 54 develops model skills test

this year, students have taken the math portion for the past three years. After the first year of using the new test's results, scores on the standardized test jumped 10 points and have stayed there, Cech said.

"It's a cause and effect relationship, and we don't have control over all variables, so we don't know what caused the jump," he said. "But it was a marked increase, and since we had just gotten through the (Dist. 54) tests, it seems logical to think they had a lot to do with it."

TEACHERS developed the test by writing educational goals and listing the skills to be taught each year. For example, by the end of second grade, students would be able to identify the maind idea in a short paragraph.

Two or three questions that test this idea were developed, and the procedure was repeated for other skills, such as capitalizing proper names or identifying vowel and consonant sounds. Cech said students take the tests in the first month of school because the results give a true picture of the amount of knowledge children have retained over the summer.

"We think it's more important to know what they understand after a couple of months of not being in school," he said. "It tells us what they really know, and if they've forgotten something, it gets more review."

WHEN TEACHERS receive the computer printout of test scores for their classes, they also receive one for the students they taught the year before, Cech said. This lets teachers know which skills their students mastered and which they did not.

"Teachers get an idea how effective their instruction was as far as objectives are concerned," he said. "It pinpoints the objectives students had difficulty with, so maybe the teacher thinks about using a different approach or materials the next year."

Teachers also can see how well their classes did compared to the district as a whole. If the difference is substantial, the teacher should consider beefing up the instruction in that area, Cech said.

DIST. 54 does not release test scores for the whole district at one time because "apparently there's not much interest," he said. During fall conferences teachers generally show parents how well their children did in the skill areas as well as how they stack up against other Dist. 54 students.

While they still give standardized tests, other Northwest suburban districts also are beginning to move away from total dependence on them. Mount Prospect Dist. 57 uses its own achievement tests on a limited basis, and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 has budgeted $30,000 to develop a test series for children in grades one through three to catch problems as soon as possible.

In Wheeling Township Dist. 21, students in grades one through eight will be given a battery of district-made achievement tests, including reading, math, science, social studies, language arts and music, this year, said Marjorie Beu, assistant superintendent for instruction.

MISS. BEU SAID the district's goal in writing its own tests is one day to have a bank of questions testing specific skills, which teachers would be able to assemble into even more personalized tests for their own classes.

When the results of standardized tests are combined with the specific scoring of the district made tests, educators have an almost unbeatable rundown on district programs and their effectiveness, Cech said.

Developing achievement tests is a massive project, and not something every district could consider, because writing objectives and test questions takes considerable time and money.

"I don't think a small district could develop its own test without federal funding. Whether we could have done it alone is questionable," Cech said. "Unless you can assign someone with a reasonable portion of time (to design the test), you'll have chaos. It's much easier to give the Iowa Test. You have to do what you can."

Thoughts on a Mattress
What's in a name? "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet" is a famous quotation.
In mattresses, the magic name is "Orthopedic."
Did you ever ask yourself what an Orthopedic mattress is? Apparently, the Government experts couldn't figure it out either. A few years ago the Federal Trade Commission made the mattress manufacturers stop using the term "Orthopedic" on their mattresses and in their advertising.
So the big mattress makers started calling their mattresses, "This-A-Pedic," "That-A-Pedic," "Whose-A-Pedic," "What's-A-Pedic" — I guess they figured a mattress by any other name would smell as sweet!
We think our customers might like to name their own mattresses. If they want a glamorous mattress, we'll call it "Cleopatra." If they want a sexy mattress, we'll call it "Marilyn." If they want a famous orthopedic type mattress, we'll call it "Doctor Ortho." If they just want a famous name, we'll call it Napoleon, or Joan of Arc, or Einstein.
Whatever they call it, we will still make it with the same quality materials and careful workmanship that we put into all of our mattresses. We still think the first requirement of a good mattress is to give a comfortable night's sleep.

What's in a name? "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet" is a famous quotation.

In mattresses, the magic name is "Orthopedic."

Did you ever ask yourself what an Orthopedic mattress is? Apparently, the Government experts couldn't figure it out either. A few years ago the Federal Trade Commission made the mattress manufacturers stop using the term "Orthopedic" on their mattresses and in their advertising.

So the big mattress makers started calling their mattresses, "This-A-Pedic," "That-A-Pedic," "Whose-A-Pedic," "What's-A-Pedic" — I guess they figured a mattress by any other name would smell as sweet!

We think our customers might like to name their own mattresses. If they want a glamorous mattress, we'll call it "Cleopatra." If they want a sexy mattress, we'll call it "Marilyn." If they want a famous orthopedic type mattress, we'll call it "Doctor Ortho." If they just want a famous name, we'll call it Napoleon, or Joan of Arc, or Einstein.

Whatever they call it, we will still make it with the same quality materials and careful workmanship that we put into all of our mattresses. We still think the first requirement of a good mattress is to give a comfortable night's sleep.

Height-ning events run in family

by GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The George Willig family of Bellerose, N.Y., can tell some tall, but true, tales of their skyscraper adventures.

Mrs. Willig, the former Therese Fortier,was a 19-year-old secretary who survived the crash 32 years ago of an Army B25 into the Empire State Building, the the world's tallest.

Last May, her oldest son, George, 28, became the human fly who scaled the outside wall of the World Trade Center's 110 stories. George Willig, a modest young man and an outdoorsman, became an instant folk hero as thousands watched his progress up the sheer glass and concrete surface.

MRS. WILLIG sees no particular coincidence in the two events.

"I survived the heights," she said. "George accomplished them."

Mrs. Willig, a vivacious blonde and mother of five, now can talk matter-of-factly about the horrifying experience of the bomber accident July 28, 1945. That was the day that the bomber, flying in heavy fog and poor visibility, crashed into the north side of the Empire State Building at the 79th floor level.

The crash killed 13 persons, including the pilot, Col. Bill Smith, a veteran of more than 50 World War II combat missions, his two passengers, and 10 of Mrs. Willig's assosiates at the Catholic War Relief Agencies. One was her boss.

Twenty-six persons were injured, many seriously, and the toll might have been greater. But it was a Saturday morning with a reduced work force.

A REPLAY OF that incredible event is in the new book, "The Sky is Falling," (Grosset & Dunlap) by Arthur Weingarten, who interviewed everyone he could locate who was involved in some way in the accident. Weingarten was 10 at the time and went to the crash scene with his fire marshal-father and Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia.

Mrs. Willig recalled in an interview that, "I had followed my usual morning routine. I got up at six, had a cup of coffee, went to Mass and was at work by nine.

"Our offices were on the west side of the building, running north and south," she told me. "My desk was at the south end.

"I was just getting ready to walk to the north end and check with my boss when it happened. It was about 9:55 a.m." Other accounts put the crash at 9:45 a.m.

"We heard this rumbling and then there was a huge fireball. We thought New York was being bombed . . . it was after the surrender in Europe and prior to the surrender in the Pacific. I think we all thought in terms of rockets and bombs."

THE GEORGE WILLIG family of Bellerose, N.Y. can tell some tall, but true, tales of their skyscraper adventures. Mrs. Willig, left, survived the crash 32 years ago of an Army B-25 into the Empire State Building. Last May, her oldest son, George, right, became the human fly and scaled the outside wall of the World Trade Center.

In seconds, spewing gasoline was afire and Mrs. Wilig said her immediate group was surrounded by flames, their only protection against the advance a frosted glass door.

"I WAS SURE we were all going to die," she said. "We prayed in between hysteria. There was no place to go . . . we were surrounded by fire.

"I threw my wristwatch, earrings and a friendship ring from George out the window. Maybe, I thought, someone will find them. It seemed a shame to let them burn up. No way was I coming back."

The ring was a present from her future husband before he left for overseas duty with the army.

"All my clothing was ruined, of course. But I still have my little prayer book from that day. It is dirty from the smoke and debris."

After being trapped in the smoke and flames for about an hour, Mrs. Willig and six other employes of the Catholic War Relief Services were rescued by firemen who led them down an interior stairwell to the 68th floor where they caught an elevator to the ground.

"I was the least injured," she said. "We all went to St. Vincent's Hospital and I checked out and went on home.

"I was back at work Monday morning . . . Catholic Charities in the building lent us some office space."

MRS. WILLIG, 52, for the last 13 years has been with St. John's University, as secretary to John Alexion, dean of college administration. Going to classes as time allows, she will be graduated from the college in January with a degree in business administration.

Occasionally, she said, as the children were growing up she would get out clippings of the bomber crash but gradually their interest waned. The children are Therese Willig Carberry, 29, a high school math teacher; George, who was a designer with Ideal Toy Corp., but is on leave after his spectacular climb "to get it all together," like writing a book; Paul, 24, in the advertising business; Stephen, 22, who is at the University of Wyoming, and Frank, 17, in school and working also in a fish store.

"Tiime is a marvelous healer," Mrs. Willig said. The shock of the crash hit her about three months later — "Every time I'd hear a plane I'd jar up." Her doctor recommended she go for a while to a religious retreat, which she did, "and when I came back to New York everything was fine."

Flying doesn't bother her. There is no latent fear of height.

MR. AND MRS. Willig weren't around to watch their son scale the World Trade Center, although he told them a couple of days beforehand of his plans. But all the children always have been active in the outdoors and they trusted George's planning, she said.

George's father is a stereotypist, working for New York City dailies, usually the "lobster" shift, or late night. He was home sleeping when George started up the World Trade Center. She was in the office — "I guess I needed the distraction of work. And then the phone started ringing! George (he's not called George Jr.) was asked why he tackled the World Trade Center. He, a climber of mountains, and rocks for years, answered, "If you don't climb, you don't understand.

"I like problem solving . . . feel more alive. I felt good about myself, something I could do well.

"I guess the surprise is that I'm not a stunt man."

State must heed road complaints

Traffic conditions in the area where Milwaukee Avenue, Old Willow Road and River Road converge in Prospect Heights is a death trap, as last week's fatal accident proves.

Three persons died and three were seriously injured last Monday in the area, adding to last year's total of 153 accidents, 49 injuries and two deaths.

It is high time for the Illinois Department of Transportaton, which is responsible for traffic control changes in River Road, to heed the pleas of Prospect Heights officials for improved safety.

The least that is needed is a reduction of the speed limit on River Road from the present 50 miles per hour.

In addition, Prospect Heights officials should continue to pursue funds which would allow them to build secondary streets to help residents of Willow River Apartment complex to get to the Willow Park Shopping center without braving the Old Willow-River roads intersection.

IDOT residents have in the past turned down Prospect Heights' requests for reduced speed limits and other traffic control measures. This is despite the clear evidence that the area is hazardous.

Cook County Sheriff's police who patrol Prospect Heights have promised to step up patrols using radar equipment to try to slow traffic. But that effort will not address itself to the problem of the blind curve that faces motorists who must turn from Old Willow Road onto River.

It may be, as residents of the area insist, that in addition to a slower speed limit, the intersection needs a traffic light. That must be determined by traffic engineers.

What is crucial is that the hazardous situation be improved — and quickly — before the roads claim any more lives.

Sen. Byrd took long road to wield Senatorial power

Jim Bishop

The United States Senate has a boss. He is a fragile popinjay, a man with a shrill voice who walks the broad corridors of the Capitol alone. He is Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the majority leader.

His predecessor, Mike Mansfield of Montana, was content to allow the Senate Caucus to set policy. The senator from West Virginia tells his august confreres that they should not discuss the Panama Canal treaty until "January or February" because that is when he intends to permit them to consider it on the Senate floor.

Byrd was born Robert Sale in North Carolina. His mother died before he reached his first birthday. His father, a carpenter, shipped the baby to the coal mines of West Virginia to live with his uncle, Titus Byrd.

NOTHING CAME easily to Byrd and he has never forgiven life for its harshness. He grew up in Stotesbury thinking Southern. The slatted houses looked alike, but the people were separated.

There was a foreign town; a native-born town; a colored town. The only thing they had in common was poverty. Robert Byrd grew up thinking it was natural to dislike blacks. He graduated first out of Mark Twain High School — not through brilliance — but because of stubborn study.

After school, he fed pigs from a slop bucket. He took a mail order course to become a butcher. At the age of 18, he married Era James, who seems to be the only person Byrd trusts completely.

When World War II started, Byrd took up welding and got a good job at a shipyard in Tampa, Florida. He joined the Ku Klux Klan. He also became a Sunday school teacher at a Baptist church. If there was a lighter side to the young man, it was when he dusted off his fiddle, rubbed resin on the bow, and sawed Hog Holler tunes.

AFTER THE WAR, he returned to West Virginia. He ran for the state House of Delegates and won. The mountaineers and the coal miners sensed that Bob Byrd was their kind.

Six years later, he was elected to Congress. He carefully straddled the coal miners and the mine owners. In the House well, he was silent. He grew an ulcer. At night he attended George Washington University, telling himself he could get nowhere without a law degree. He won it in 1964.

By that time, he was a United States senator. Byrd sees the Senate as an august, dignified group of honorable statesmen. And yet, in a not too subtle manner, Robert Byrd became a man who piled up points.

He achieved this by doing all sorts of menial favors for other senators. A good journalist, Laurence Leamer, got to know Byrd, and wrote in his "Playing for Keeps in Washington" that the senator insisted that every letter from his constituents be answered on the day of arrival, no matter how late the staff had to work.

HE MAKES 1,500 random phone calls a year to West Virginia voters. On long weekends, he returns to West Virginia, carefully inking in each county on an office map. He studied senate procedures and rules until they were committed to memory. His hero was Richard Russell of Georgia.

Byrd is a small and pale man, but he filibustered against a civil rights bill in 1961, speaking for 21 hours. When Russell Long was Senate whip, the fiddler stood in the wings, waiting. But in 1967, when Long stepped down, Byrd was beaten by the rich kid, Ted Kennedy.

Four years later, he fought Kennedy for the same job, and beat him. "I'm in a position to do things for others," he said modestly. "I'm in a position to know what's going to happen tomorrow." Senator Byrd never met a Kennedy he admired. He is not a socializer; he disdains parties.

And yet he is unafraid to assume a front page reporting, and to reevaluate blacks and shiftless whites. "Wherever some people go," he says, "the rat holes will follow. Wherever some people go, the ghettos will follow."

THIS YEAR HE was elected majority leader. It makes him the third most powerful man in the nation, behind the president and the speaker of the House. In any case, it is now Byrd's Senate. It is he who sets up the schedules for the rare floor debates seen these days.

Some senators have 55 or more staff personnel. Byrd has 27. Some will not emerge into the corridors without a clustering staff. Robert Byrd walks alone. He has never spoken a bad word about any senator. His ulcer is sometimes in flames.

He has two married daughters, six grandchildren. The coal kid is now 60. He says there are four things his people believe in: God Almighty; Sears Roebuck; Carter's Liver Pills; and Robert Byrd . . .

Battle on paperwork: Victory beyond grasp?

Pity the poor Commission on Federal Paperwork. No matter what kind of report they wrote, they would have been blamed for contributing to the problem they were studying.

And so, the jokes about the fact the commission drafted a final 77-page report after receiving 36 separate reports and 770 recommendations are inevitable.

It took a lot of paper to conclude that all the paper generated by the federal government isn't necessary.

There are some good — though obvious — points in the commission's findings. One is that federal agencies ought to consider how much paperwork they are requiring whenever they make new rules. Another is that Congress should try to minimize paperwork requirements in drafting laws.

The commission also found that the cost of federal paper work may exceed $100 billion a year — $500 for each U.S. resident.

And one commission member told Pres. Jimmy Carter that if he succeeds in cutting the paperwork burden he will be the "greatest president in history."

That conclusion may prove correct. It may be that it will be harder to cut paperwork than to win the Civil War or lead the nation after Pearl Harbor.

After all, the paperwork commission couldn't even avoid paperwork when defining the problem.

Legislative veto may provoke Carter

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
In Washington

A significant new battle appears to be looming in the institutional power struggle between the White House and Congress that has existed as long as the Republic itself.

President Carter, irked by what he sees as usurpation of executive branch authority, is weighing a challenge to the growing congressional tendency to assert control over enforcement of laws as well as their enactment.

At issue is the "legislative veto," a device Congress has employed at an ever-accelerating rate over the past decade in an effort to insure that executive agencies carry out the intent of a law even when they don't happen to agree with it, as was often the case under Presidents Nixon and Ford.

IN ITS MOST common form, it is a provision attached to a bill that gives either house of Congress, or in some cases a single committee, the right to veto any regulations promulgated by an executive agency to enforce the law in question.

The legislative veto is not a new creation. The first one dates back to a government reorganization act of 1932. But until recent years, it was a tool that was used only sparingly by Congress. More than half of the laws containing such a provision have been enacted since 1969.

The election of a Democratic president has done nothing to dampen congressional enthusiasm for the legislative veto. In fact, the leading advocate of the device is a longtime Carter friend and supporter, Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga.

Levitas is the chief sponsor of pending legislation that would give either house of Congress the power to veto any regulation promulgated henceforth by an executive agency. His bill very nearly passed the House last year, falling just two votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed when it was brought up in the final days of the session under a suspension of the rules. Nearly half the House members have signed on as cosponsors this year.

CARTER, AT A recent cabinet meeting, expressed grave concern about the constitutionality of the legislative veto, which has always been disputed by the Justice Department. He also brooded about the political implications of giving Congress the right to second-guess executive branch decisions, according to sources who attended the meeting.

At Carter's direction, White House counsel Robert Lipshutz is now directing an administration review of all existing and proposed laws which contain some form of legislative veto.

"We want to figure out some way of resolving this peaceably," said a Justice Department official involved in the review. "We don't want to declare war on Congress."

Carter's opposition to the legislative veto, while traditional for a chief executive, is a touch awkward for a president who places so much emphasis on making the federal bureaucracy more responsive to the people.

AS LEVITAS NOTES, regulations issued by executive agencies carry the full force of law, but those who draft such rules are not accountable to the voters. Members of Congress, who take the political heat for unpopular federal regulations, cannot correct abuses without going through the entire cumbersome process of rewriting the basic law in question unless a mechanism like the legislative veto is available.

"The real value of the legislative veto," the Georgia Democrat said, "is that it sensitizes the bureaucracy. Those guys downtown will be a lot more careful about how they write regulations if they know Congress is looking over their shoulders."

Sometime next year, the Levitas bill is likely to reach the House floor. Unless Carter changes his opinion of the legislative veto procedure, a full-scale donnybrook between the White House and Congress could erupt at that point.

'Retirement chicanery'

The passage by the House of the bill to raise retirement age to 70 is another in the series of sad examples of our Congress avoiding its responsibility. In no way can this particular legislation be considered sensible.

It would appear to be an oblique attempt to shore up the finances of Social Security. Would it not be more honest (or courageous) to either propose raising the contributions required to the point needed to make the fund solvent or to remove those other social insurance features more properly part of the welfare system that have been tacked on over the years — or both? Social Security was supposed to be a retirement fund, remember?

Even worse, the popular press and politicians are constantly crying out about the terrible unemployment situtation for young people. Now a bill has been started through Congress which almost expressly prevents young people from getting jobs and retards their promotional opportunities when they do become employed.

Over the years we have tried to develop ways to give working people a chance to retire and have some leisure rather than work until the day they die, yet this latest congressional action is being foisted off on us under the guise of a remarkable advance of our civil rights. What a fraud!

I for one object to this chicanery, and for the record, I am over 50.

In January of 1974, I was leaving a school in which I shared a lot of time, thoughts, and growth. When I left I realized that it was just a release of all students who completed the task of high school, then off into all phases of life. At the same time the world was going through a release of its own-kind, and I was adjusting to the new setting that now confronted me.

I noticed just how dehumanizing things were getting, but always it was just a step away and it wasn't really affecting me too much, I thought.

Now I can't blame the people involved in this trap of dehumanization who are completely unattached to human emotion and human respect. They use the excuse of action sells paper; action sells television. Just count how many people who are slaughtered in just one night on your tube. The twist to it all is the general public loves it as long as it is not them. But what happens when it is them, as in my case?

I received a copy of the Aug. 10 Daily Herald in the mail. I just couldn't believe my eyes. It was a shock to hear of a friend and ex-class mate shot to death in the way he was. But after seeing his body sold out on the front page with just a merciless caption under his photo, I no longer could sit back at this lack of human respect.

I truly can't blame the photographer, writers, or the editor in chief for allowing this. Who I do accuse are the folks who will allow coverage like this to exist. Why do you have to show the body of anyone? Isn't it enough of a shock to hear or read about such a death? Are we all numb to the fact that a violent death is the tragedy in itself.

But inside, I know there are some who aren't numb, because they all felt the loss.

I strongly ask the media to put a hold on human desecration in their harsh position. He is opposed to ghetto their coverage ethics. And for the public to stop selling the product of death. Please, let's elevate the world and not bring it down.

'Let's aid allies'

President Carter turns his back on friendly, anti-Communist countries such as Taiwan, Rhodesia and South Africa. It is evident that Carter policy advocates stronger ties with Communist Vietnam, Communist China, Communist Cuba and the U.S.S.R.

Personally, I don't want this administration to move toward the normalization of our relations with the People's Republic of China. The (Red) Chinese dictatorship has without mercy slaughtered tens of millions of enslaved people.

Russia and Communist China now rule over a billion slaves in Eastern Europe, Asia, Africa and Cuba.

We must aid Taiwan and all our anti-Communist allies. These countries fighting for freedom know the meaning of true "human rights."

State must heed road complaints

Traffic conditions in the area where Milwaukee Avenue, Old Willow Road and River Road converge in Prospect Heights is a death trap, as last week's fatal accident proves.

Three persons died and three were seriously injured last Monday in the area, adding to last year's total of 153 accidents, 49 injuries and two deaths.

It is high time for the Illinois Department of Transportaton, which is responsible for traffic control changes in River Road, to heed the pleas of Prospect Heights officials for improved safety.

The least that is needed is a reduction of the speed limit on River Road from the present 50 miles per hour.

In addition, Prospect Heights officials should continue to pursue funds which would allow them to build secondary streets to help residents of Willow River Apartment complex to get to the Willow Park Shopping center without braving the Old Willow-River roads intersection.

IDOT residents have in the past turned down Prospect Heights' requests for reduced speed limits and other traffic control measures. This is despite the clear evidence that the area is hazardous.

Cook County Sheriff's police who patrol Prospect Heights have promised to step up patrols using radar equipment to try to slow traffic. But that effort will not address itself to the problem of the blind curve that faces motorists who must turn from Old Willow Road onto River.

It may be, as residents of the area insist, that in addition to a slower speed limit, the intersection needs a traffic light. That must be determined by traffic engineers.

What is crucial is that the hazardous situation be improved — and quickly — before the roads claim any more lives.

Battle on paperwork: Victory beyond grasp?

Pity the poor Commission on Federal Paperwork. No matter what kind of report they wrote, they would have been blamed for contributing to the problem they were studying.

And so, the jokes about the fact the commission drafted a final 77-page report after receiving 36 separate reports and 770 recommendations are inevitable.

It took a lot of paper to conclude that all the paper generated by the federal government isn't necessary.

There are some good — though obvious — points in the commission's findings. One is that federal agencies ought to consider how much paperwork they are requiring whenever they make new rules. Another is that Congress should try to minimize paperwork requirements in drafting laws.

The commission also found that the cost of federal paper work may exceed $100 billion a year — $500 for each U.S. resident.

And one commission member told Pres. Jimmy Carter that if he succeeds in cutting the paperwork burden he will be the "greatest president in history."

That conclusion may prove correct. It may be that it will be harder to cut paperwork than to win the Civil War or lead the nation after Pearl Harbor.

After all, the paperwork commission couldn't even avoid paperwork when defining the problem.

Sen. Byrd took long road to wield Senatorial power

Jim Bishop

The United States Senate has a boss. He is a fragile popinjay, a man with a shrill voice who walks the broad corridors of the Capitol alone. He is Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, the majority leader.

His predecessor, Mike Mansfield of Montana, was content to allow the Senate Caucus to set policy. The senator from West Virginia tells his august confreres that they should not discuss the Panama Canal treaty until "January or February" because that is when he intends to permit them to consider it on the Senate floor.

Byrd was born Robert Sale in North Carolina. His mother died before he reached his first birthday. His father, a carpenter, shipped the baby to the coal mines of West Virginia to live with his uncle, Titus Byrd.

NOTHING CAME easily to Byrd and he has never forgiven life for its harshness. He grew up in Stotesbury thinking Southern. The slatted houses looked alike, but the people were separated.

There was a foreign town; a native-born town; a colored town. The only thing they had in common was poverty. Robert Byrd grew up thinking it was natural to dislike blacks. He graduated first out of Mark Twain High School — not through brilliance — but because of stubborn study.

After school, he fed pigs from a slop bucket. He took a mail order course to become a butcher. At the age of 18, he married Era James, who seems to be the only person Byrd trusts completely.

When World War II started, Byrd took up welding and got a good job at a shipyard in Tampa, Florida. He joined the Ku Klux Klan. He also became a Sunday school teacher at a Baptist church. If there was a lighter side to the young man, it was when he dusted off his fiddle, rubbed resin on the bow, and sawed Hog Holler tunes.

AFTER THE WAR, he returned to West Virginia. He ran for the state House of Delegates and won. The mountaineers and the coal miners sensed that Bob Byrd was their kind.

Six years later, he was elected to Congress. He carefully straddled the coal miners and the mine owners. In the House well, he was silent. He grew an ulcer. At night he attended George Washington University, telling himself he could get nowhere without a law degree. He won it in 1964.

By that time, he was a United States senator. Byrd sees the Senate as an august, dignified group of honorable statesmen. And yet, in a not too subtle manner, Robert Byrd became a man who piled up points.

He achieved this by doing all sorts of menial favors for other senators. A good journalist, Laurence Leamer, got to know Byrd, and wrote in his "Playing for Keeps in Washington" that the senator insisted that every letter from his constituents be answered on the day of arrival, no matter how late the staff had to work.

HE MAKES 1,500 random phone calls a year to West Virginia voters. On long weekends, he returns to West Virginia, carefully inking in each county on an office map. He studied senate procedures and rules until they were committed to memory. His hero was Richard Russell of Georgia.

Byrd is a small and pale man, but he filibustered against a civil rights bill in 1961, speaking for 21 hours. When Russell Long was Senate whip, the fiddler stood in the wings, waiting. But in 1967, when Long stepped down, Byrd was beaten by the rich kid, Ted Kennedy.

Four years later, he fought Kennedy for the same job, and beat him. "I'm in a position to do things for others," he said modestly. "I'm in a position to know what's going to happen tomorrow." Senator Byrd never met a Kennedy he admired. He is not a socializer; he disdains parties.

And yet he is unafraid to assume a front page reporting, and to reevaluate blacks and shiftless whites. "Wherever some people go," he says, "the rat holes will follow. Wherever some people go, the ghettos will follow."

THIS YEAR HE was elected majority leader. It makes him the third most powerful man in the nation, behind the president and the speaker of the House. In any case, it is now Byrd's Senate. It is he who sets up the schedules for the rare floor debates seen these days.

Some senators have 55 or more staff personnel. Byrd has 27. Some will not emerge into the corridors without a clustering staff. Robert Byrd walks alone. He has never spoken a bad word about any senator. His ulcer is sometimes in flames.

He has two married daughters, six grandchildren. The coal kid is now 60. He says there are four things his people believe in: God Almighty; Sears Roebuck; Carter's Liver Pills; and Robert Byrd . . .

Legislative veto may provoke Carter

Martha Angle and Robert Walters
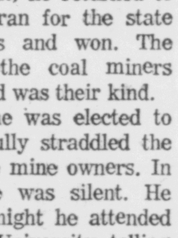
In Washington



A significant new battle appears to be looming in the institutional power struggle between the White House and Congress that has existed as long as the Republic itself.

President Carter, irked by what he sees as usurpation of executive branch authority, is weighing a challenge to the growing congressional tendency to assert control over enforcement of laws as well as their enactment.

At issue is the "legislative veto," a device Congress has employed at an ever-accelerating rate over the past decade in an effort to insure that executive agencies carry out the intent of a law even when they don't happen to agree with it, as was often the case under Presidents Nixon and Ford.

IN ITS MOST common form, it is a provision attached to a bill that gives either house of Congress, or in some cases a single committee, the right to veto any regulations promulgated by an executive agency to enforce the law in question.

The legislative veto is not a new creation. The first one dates back to a government reorganization act of 1932. But until recent years, it was a tool that was used only sparingly by Congress. More than half of the laws containing such a provision have been enacted since 1969.

The election of a Democratic president has done nothing to dampen congressional enthusiasm for the legislative veto. In fact, the leading advocate of the device is a longtime Carter friend and supporter, Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga.

Levitas is the chief sponsor of pending legislation that would give either house of Congress the power to veto any regulation promulgated henceforth by an executive agency. His bill very nearly passed the House last year, falling just two votes shy of the two-thirds majority needed when it was brought up in the final days of the session under a suspension of the rules. Nearly half the House members have signed on as cosponsors this year.

CARTER, AT A recent cabinet meeting, expressed grave concern about the constitutionality of the legislative veto, which has always been disputed by the Justice Department. He also brooded about the political implications of giving Congress the right to second-guess executive branch decisions, according to sources who attended the meeting.

At Carter's direction, White House counsel Robert Lipshutz is now directing an administration review of all existing and proposed laws which contain some form of legislative veto.

"We want to figure out some way of resolving this peaceably," said a Justice Department official involved in the review. "We don't want to declare war on Congress."

Carter's opposition to the legislative veto, while traditional for a chief executive, is a touch awkward for a president who places so much emphasis on making the federal bureaucracy more responsive to the people.

AS LEVITAS NOTES, regulations issued by executive agencies carry the full force of law, but those who draft such rules are not accountable to the voters. Members of Congress, who take the political heat for unpopular federal regulations, cannot correct abuses without going through the entire cumbersome process of rewriting the basic law in question unless a mechanism like the legislative veto is available.

"The real value of the legislative veto," the Georgia Democrat said, "is that it sensitizes the bureaucracy. Those guys downtown will be a lot more careful about how they write regulations if they know Congress is looking over their shoulders."

Sometime next year, the Levitas bill is likely to reach the House floor. Unless Carter changes his opinion of the legislative veto procedure, a full-scale donnybrook between the White House and Congress could erupt at that point.

'Retirement chicanery'

The passage by the House of the bill to raise retirement age to 70 is another in the series of sad examples of our Congress avoiding its responsibility. In no way can this particular legislation be considered sensible.

It would appear to be an oblique attempt to shore up the finances of Social Security. Would it not be more honest (or courageous) to either propose raising the contributions required to the point needed to make the fund solvent or to remove those other social insurance features more properly part of the welfare system that have been tacked on over the years — or both? Social Security was supposed to be a retirement fund, remember?

Even worse, the popular press and politicians are constantly crying out about the terrible unemployment situtation for young people. Now a bill has been started through Congress which almost expressly prevents young people from getting jobs and retards their promotional opportunities when they do become employed.

Over the years we have tried to develop ways to give working people a chance to retire and have some leisure rather than work until the day they die, yet this latest congressional action is being foisted off on us under the guise of a remarkable advance of our civil rights. What a fraud!

I for one object to this chicanery, and for the record, I am over 50.

In January of 1974, I was leaving a school in which I shared a lot of time, thoughts, and growth. When I left I realized that it was just a release of all students who completed the task of high school, then off into all phases of life. At the same time the world was going through a release of its own-kind, and I was adjusting to the new setting that now confronted me.

I noticed just how dehumanizing things were getting, but always it was just a step away and it wasn't really affecting me too much, I thought.

Now I can't blame the people involved in this trap of dehumanization who are completely unattached to human emotion and human respect. They use the excuse of action sells paper; action sells television. Just count how many people who are slaughtered in just one night on your tube. The twist to it all is the general public loves it as long as it is not them. But what happens when it is them, as in my case?

I received a copy of the Aug. 10 Daily Herald in the mail. I just couldn't believe my eyes. It was a shock to hear of a friend and ex-class mate shot to death in the way he was. But after seeing his body sold out on the front page with just a merciless caption under his photo, I no longer could sit back at this lack of human respect.

I truly can't blame the photographer, writers, or the editor in chief for allowing this. Who I do accuse are the folks who will allow coverage like this to exist. Why do you have to show the body of anyone? Isn't it enough of a shock to hear or read about such a death? Are we all numb to the fact that a violent death is the tragedy in itself.

But inside, I know there are some who aren't numb, because they all felt the loss.

I strongly ask the media to put a hold on human desecration in their harsh position. He is opposed to ghetto their coverage ethics. And for the public to stop selling the product of death. Please, let's elevate the world and not bring it down.

Novelist dismisses press' influence

With the downfall of Bert Lance,the news business has been credited with another "victory." It is the kind of credit that makes those of us in the business uneasy. If we think it is justified, we say that we have more power than we want. If we don't think it is justified, we are disturbed that other people do. We are, we say plaintively, reporters, not activists; the watchdog, not the arresting officer.

But even as we agonize we experience a not unpleasant awareness of our own importance. Credit aside, the role of the vigilant, militant free press again has been confirmed. We are necessary and useful.

That is heady stuff, which is why I commend to my colleagues a timely antidote. It is an article in a new periodical, the Washington Journalism Review, by Larry McMurtry, a novelist.

I DON'T AGREE with McMurtry. In fact I am infuriated by his article because it questions the very basis of what I believe about the role of the press in a free society. But the infuriating can be stimulating, and the stimulating is always valuable.

Since few outside the news business are likely to see McMurtry's article, let me, to the extent that space permits, give him his say.

He raises two big questions. Is the heavy news diet being fed the American public necessary or even desirable? And does the press have the power and influence it thinks it has? You can't strike closer than the jugular than that.

Charles B. Seib

The news industry assumes, says McMurtry, that the public needs its product, just as Detroit assumes that the public needs its cars. That is an assumption he questions.

HE CORRECTLY identifies its basis, as advanced by news people: "An informed citizenry is the surest safeguard of good government and humane society." But he calls that a weak, if not ludicrous, rationale.

"The human propensity for flying in the face of fact rages completely unchecked" despite the best efforts of the press, he declares. He cites Richard Nixon's two presidential election victories after two decades of "judiciously damning words" from the press as evidence, and suggests: "It is conceivable that news, like poetry, makes nothing happen."

Like many people, including some journalists, McMurtry sees an irritating arrogance in the press. But beneath it he detects an insecurity born of the ephemeral nature of the product and the press' own impotenace.

The press, he says, is haunted by the recognition thatthe influence it claims may be a hallucination.

CERTAINTLY journalists have excellent reasons for suspecting that their power is not quite real, since they know better than anyone that the product they are selling is indeed a superfluity. It is no sort of necessity, and there is always just the chance that the public will find this out.

"Some seer may come along and point out to them that it is quite possible to lead sane and happy lives, to be well educated and culturally active, and even to perform their duties as citizens intelligently and responsibly with no recourse whatever to the AP and the UPI, the Washington Post or the New York Times, or Time or Newsweek, or ABC, CBS, and NBC."

While he sees little danger that this "nation of news-junkies" will kick the habit, he asserts that doing so can produce a "sense of creeping peacefulness" and the mind's return to "a condition of almost Wordworthian freshness."

McMurtry raises some provocative questions — "whether or not the news industry is actually putting obstacles in the way of sound citizenship and human happiness," for one. He goes on:

"IS IT POSSIBLE that the stimuli of news-bombardment is actively harmful, creating, as it does, a constant, if slight emotional disruption — the equivalent, perhaps, of a low fever? Why is it that such a high percentage of news is negative not merely in content but in tone; is it catering to a human need for bad news or is it creating such a need? Can newspapers be said to be performing the cathartic functions of Greek religious drama, to purge us of pity and terror by informing us constantly about the pitiful and the terrorized? . . .

"How much news is enough, how much is too much, how much is a surfeit and how much a disaster? Does news do any harm, does it do any good, is it really an agent of culture or merely one of the innumerable idle pastimes with which we distract ourselves?"

Well, you can understand why McMurtry's article is likely to make a journalist see red. Nevertheless, his questions are worth pondering once the flush of indignation fades.

I AGREE WITH him that the news business is plagued by superficiality, triviality, and negativism. I agree that a spell away from the news can produce "a sense of creeping peacefulness." I agree, even, that a person can be a good — if passive — citizen without patronizing the news business.

It does not follow, however, that a free society could long remain free without a free press — flawed, eccentric, and annoying though that press might be. The vacuum inevitably would be filled by authoritarian government, and the peacefulness of the citizenry would not be that of a free people.

Carolina clash— 'Pug,' Thurmond to face off in '78

COLUMBIS, S.C. — What promises to be next year's sharpest congressional battle has just begun in South Carolina. Charles (Pug) Ravenel, a 38-year-old investment banker and Democrat who is considered a political liberal in South Carolina, will run for the Senate seat held by Strom Thurmond, 74, one of the South's leading conservative voices.

Sen. Thurmond has been unbeatable since 1954. But although Ravenel has never held political office, he is well known and is considered something of a boy wonder in the state's politics. Ravenel, who got his nickname as a boy when he smashed his nose running into a pole during a baseball game, grew up in Charleston, S.C., the son of a sheet metal worker.

In the late 1950s he left the state to attend Harvard on a scholarship, was a star quarterback on Harvard's football team, worked in the Lyndon Johnson administration for a year, married a girl from Connecticut, and became a successful banker on Wall Street.

IN 1972, HE returned to South Carolina to run an investment banking firm in Charleston and to prepare for the 1974 governor's race.

Totally unknown in his home state, he mounted a strong media campaign that year which won him the Democratic nomination for governor. But his name was removed from the final ballot when the state supreme court ruled that he had not kept residence for five years in the state.

Thurmond's credentials are in a different class. Elected governor of South Carolina in 1946 as a Democrat, he left the Democratic party in 1948 to become the Dixiecrat nominee for president. He carried South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana and became the segregationist symbol of the South.

SINCE HIS ELECTION to the Senate in 1954 as a write-in candidate (the first and only senator ever elected in this fashion), Thurmond has been unbeatable, running up lopsided victory margins in election after election. In 1966 and 1972 he ran as a Republican, having switched parties in 1964 because the Democrats, he said, were "leading the evolution of our nation to be a socialistic dictatorsship."

He has been a solid Republican ever since, and was widely credited with creating the so-called "southern strategy" that helped to win the White House for Richard Nixon in 1968. In recent years he has become increasingly conservative, opposing labor unions in general and unionization of the military in particular, criticizing President Carter's amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders and championing large defense budgets.

In recent weeks he has emerged as the leading opponent in the Senate of the Panama Canal treaty. "The canal is ours and we should keep it," Thurmond said, adding that the proposed settlement is a "giveaway."

MOST OF THURMOND'S positions are popular in South Carolina, which is considered one of the natin's most conservative states. He also has built up a reputation for providing the best and swiftest service in Washington for and swiftest service in Washington for his South Carolina constituents.

But Ravenel argues that because of population shifts and young people coming of voting age, a significant proportion of those eligible to cast ballots next year have come on to the lists since 1972.

He hopes in particular to attract the votes of the 26 per cent of the electorate who are black. Although Thurmond has shrewdly moved during the past five years to neutralize that part of his opposition. Last year, the senator recommended a prominent black civil rights attorney from South Carolina for a federal judgeship, and he has recently enrolled his six-year-old daughter in a half black school in Columbia, South Carolina.

THURMOND IS expected to use his 30-year-old wife and four children aged 18 months to 6, extensively during the campaign to counteract changes that he is too old to be reelected. Articles have begun to appear in state newspapers declaring that Thurmond jogs two miles every weekday morning and three to four miles at weekends in a pair of red shorts and a "Run For Fun" T-shirt.

But the Republican veteran, who says this will be his last political race, will not have the support of President Carter. The president has promised to campaign for Ravenel, an old friend, if he becomes the Democratic nominee.

"How much news is enough, how much is too much, how much is a surfeit and how much a disaster? Does news do any harm, does it do any good, is it really an agent of culture or merely one of the innumerable idle pastimes with which we distract ourselves?"

Well, you can understand why McMurtry's article is likely to make a journalist see red. Nevertheless, his questions are worth pondering once the flush of indignation fades.

I AGREE WITH him that the news business is plagued by superficiality, triviality, and negativism. I agree that a spell away from the news can produce "a sense of creeping peacefulness." I agree, even, that a person can be a good — if passive — citizen without patronizing the news business.

It does not follow, however, that a free society could long remain free without a free press — flawed, eccentric, and annoying though that press might be. The vacuum inevitably would be filled by authoritarian government, and the peacefulness of the citizenry would not be that of a free people.

Carolina clash— 'Pug,' Thurmond to face off in '78

COLUMBIS, S.C. — What promises to be next year's sharpest congressional battle has just begun in South Carolina. Charles (Pug) Ravenel, a 38-year-old investment banker and Democrat who is considered a political liberal in South Carolina, will run for the Senate seat held by Strom Thurmond, 74, one of the South's leading conservative voices.

Sen. Thurmond has been unbeatable since 1954. But although Ravenel has never held political office, he is well known and is considered something of a boy wonder in the state's politics. Ravenel, who got his nickname as a boy when he smashed his nose running into a pole during a baseball game, grew up in Charleston, S.C., the son of a sheet metal worker.

In the late 1950s he left the state to attend Harvard on a scholarship, was a star quarterback on Harvard's football team, worked in the Lyndon Johnson administration for a year, married a girl from Connecticut, and became a successful banker on Wall Street.

IN 1972, HE returned to South Carolina to run an investment banking firm in Charleston and to prepare for the 1974 governor's race.

Totally unknown in his home state, he mounted a strong media campaign that year which won him the Democratic nomination for governor. But his name was removed from the final ballot when the state supreme court ruled that he had not kept residence for five years in the state.

Thurmond's credentials are in a different class. Elected governor of South Carolina in 1946 as a Democrat, he left the Democratic party in 1948 to become the Dixiecrat nominee for president. He carried South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana and became the segregationist symbol of the South.

SINCE HIS ELECTION to the Senate in 1954 as a write-in candidate (the first and only senator ever elected in this fashion), Thurmond has been unbeatable, running up lopsided victory margins in election after election. In 1966 and 1972 he ran as a Republican, having switched parties in 1964 because the Democrats, he said, were "leading the evolution of our nation to be a socialistic dictatorsship."

He has been a solid Republican ever since, and was widely credited with creating the so-called "southern strategy" that helped to win the White House for Richard Nixon in 1968. In recent years he has become increasingly conservative, opposing labor unions in general and unionization of the military in particular, criticizing President Carter's amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders and championing large defense budgets.

In recent weeks he has emerged as the leading opponent in the Senate of the Panama Canal treaty. "The canal is ours and we should keep it," Thurmond said, adding that the proposed settlement is a "giveaway."

MOST OF THURMOND'S positions are popular in South Carolina, which is considered one of the natin's most conservative states. He also has built up a reputation for providing the best and swiftest service in Washington for and swiftest service in Washington for his South Carolina constituents.

But Ravenel argues that because of population shifts and young people coming of voting age, a significant proportion of those eligible to cast ballots next year have come on to the lists since 1972.

He hopes in particular to attract the votes of the 26 per cent of the electorate who are black. Although Thurmond has shrewdly moved during the past five years to neutralize that part of his opposition. Last year, the senator recommended a prominent black civil rights attorney from South Carolina for a federal judgeship, and he has recently enrolled his six-year-old daughter in a half black school in Columbia, South Carolina.

THURMOND IS expected to use his 30-year-old wife and four children aged 18 months to 6, extensively during the campaign to counteract changes that he is too old to be re-elected. Articles have begun to appear in state newspapers declaring that Thurmond jogs two miles every weekday morning and three to four miles at weekends in a pair of red shorts and a "Run For Fun" T-shirt.

But the Republican veteran, who says this will be his last political race, will not have the support of President Carter. The president has promised to campaign for Ravenel, an old friend, if he becomes the Democratic nominee.

Plenty of bidding here as public works go private

The secret's in the sneer.

There were more than 100 spectators at the Northwest Municipal Conference's auction Saturday, and many of them were obviously experienced bidders who had mastered the art of looking disinterested.

The shrewd bidder, they say, never shows his excitement over the profit that could be made with a little paint and a few repairs.

And while the rapid-fire delivery of the auctioneer was heard by the crowd, the bidders played their roles well, their lips curled in a slight sneer and their eyes viewing the merchandise with much disdain.

The merchandise, sold at the Arlington Heights public works garage, 222 N. Ridge Ave., included a bright yellow dump truck, a neglected lawnmower and a set of solid brass street lanterns that once illuminated the streets of the Scarsdale subdivision, Arlington Heights.

It was the 50-year-old lamps that attracted the most attention. Most of them went for $80 to $90 apiece. Their new owners talked of converting the old lamps into functional plant stands. The consensus was that they certainly would make interesting conversation pieces.

And while successful bidders gloated over their newly-acquired possessions, the auctioneer tossed insults to the crowd in hopes of bolstering his bids.

"Do you folks know how much it costs to fly to Florida these days?" the auctioneer said after he couldn't raise more than $180 for an old car. "You pay a couple hundred bucks but you can't take that plane home with you. You pay $180 for this car and you take your transportation home free."

A sneering bidder gestured and the car sold for $230.

Carter listens to old friends: Powell

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House Press Sec. Jody Powell says those who have known President Carter longest are more likely to argue with him, and he personally has persuaded Carter to change his mind.

Powell, in an interview released Sunday by U.S. News & World Report, also said Georgians in the White House are much less conscious of their common roots "than the folks who write about it."

Carter has been criticized for surrounding himself with long-time Georgia friends and it has been suggested he does not get a wide enough variety of outside opinions.

POWELL SAID most presidents choose personal staff members with whom they have worked for long periods, and he does not see the Georgia heritage reflected in White House decisions.

"I can't think of a decision, except for where I go home for Thanksgiving and Christmas, in which my state of birth has been a factor," he said.

Powell said Carter's longtime aides do not hesitate to disagree with him.

"I think the people most likely to get into an argument with the President are the people who have known him the longest," Powell said.

Have you ever told him when you think he's wrong?

"Sure."

Have you ever persuaded him to change his mind?

"Yes."

POWELL ALSO discussed news media coverage of the White House, saying he and Carter both feel "within the limits of the institution, we really don't have any grounds for basic complaints about coverage."

He said there is "an amusing fascination" among the press with White House reaction to the aftermath of the Bert Lance resignation.

"The principal thing I've detected is an almost insatiable desire to discover some reaction in the White House against the press," he said. "There is a sort of fascination — a probing for some evidence of paranoia or hunkering down or circling of the wagons. I don't think it's there."

Powell also said that before a news conference, Carter reviews materials likely to be discussed and 20 minutes before the session begins, he talks with Powell and his top foreign and domestic policy advisers.

Drugs reported to aid asthma

Two new drugs are benefiting asthma sufferers this fall, the Journal of the American Medical Assn. reports today.

One of the drugs, beclomethasone dipropionate, was proved effective in tests with 30 patients with severe, chronic asthma problems, said Dr. D. Robert Webb of the Mason Clinic, Seattle, Wash.

Beclomethasone dipropionate has been used in Great Britain since 1973, but only recently was approved for use in the U.S., he said.

The other new product, cromolyn sodium, has been marketed throughout the world since 1968 and has now become available in the U.S., the Journal reports.

Beauty after 35? It takes activity—maybe surgery

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

She sweeps into the Ritz-Carlton cafe, all smash and dash and verve. Her hair is soft blonde, curving nonchalantly around a tanned face that evokes images of long bubble baths and weekends in Connecticut. The eyeglasses are large and fashionable; the gem earrings subdued and expensive.

It comes as no surprise when she orders an iced tea (no sugar) and a crabmeat salad with Russian dressing. This is the type of woman who would consider "banana split" just short of obscene.

There's no doubt about it: Eileen Ford, head of the Ford Modeling Agency in New York and author of such how-to books as "A More Perfect You in 21 Days," knows her stuff. When she sets aside her avocado to talk about yoga breathing exercises, 14-day vegetarian diets and the importance of an active sex life, you listen.

ESPECIALLY IF you're approaching the years when hot flashes, crow's feet and middle-aged spread become more than cliches — the time that Mrs. Ford says can wreak havoc on any woman.

"Middle-aged women are truly the forgotten generation," she says. "No one pays any attention to them . . . they don't have any guides to follow."

No wonder. After all, who wouldn't feel forgotten when a stable of slim young models like Lauren Hutton and Susan Blakely (both Ford discoveries) present their flat stomachs and sun-streaked hair as a national ideal?

Mrs. Ford doesn't deny that attractive young girls are at a definite advantage: "You can't help being wistful when you hear a Benny Goodman record and then look at your own kids." But her latest book, "Beauty Now and Forever . . . Secrets of Beauty after 35" (Simon and Schuster) is chock full of advice on adapting professional beauty standards to those of car-pooling, grocery-shopping suburbia.

"WHEN YOU LOOK your best, people are attracted to you . . . it's as simple as that," she says. "The crisis years start the day you stop taking care of yourself . . . it's up to you to keep yourself young."

Developing that positive attitude, she says, depends on your ability to take a good, long, critical look at yourself — eating habits, hairstyle, personality. If you're succumbing to rich souffles and you don't know who Bianca Jagger is, you're out of it.

"You've got to keep active and on top of things — it's the only way," Mrs. Ford declares. She ought to know: she works seven days a week on her modeling agency, is passionately involved in child and wife abuse laws, write and lectures on beauty, and still finds time to keep up a large flower garden in Connecticut. To top it off, she's never watched a soap opera!

BUT IMMERSING yourself in mental and physical activity won't do a thing for grey hair and wrinkles. Mrs. Ford knows it, and she's armed with solutions ranging from the right shade of hair color to chin lifts, eye lifts and nose bobs.

"I'm all in favor of cosmetic surgery if it's really needed," she says. "If I had large, pendulous breasts, I would go to the best hospital around and get it taken care of. It's a serious decision — not the kind of thing you shop around for."

And how does she feel about going under the knife herself?

"I haven't gotten up enough courage yet. I was going to get my chin done this fall, but the fence needs fixing first."

If you'd love to get rid of that spare tire, but are worried about being labeled as a vain, egotistical female, forget it: "Yes, there is such a thing as being too concerned with your appearance, but most people are afraid to be concerned at all," she says. "You have to give it a try, because if you don't, someone else will."

AHA — THERE'S the rub. According to Mrs. Ford, the "Seven (or 17) Year Itch" is as catching today as it was when Marilyn Monroe did the scratching. If you stay on top of the battle, you're all right. If not . . .

"It's the beginning of the end the day you say, 'I'm too tired,'" she says firmly. "It's a fact of life that men want women to meet their needs . . . if you can't, of course they'll look for younger women.

"BEAUTY NOW AND FOREVER," Eileen Ford's guide to keeping young after 35, offers readers tips on everything from health spas and vegetable diets to improving a negative mental attitude.

"Marriage in the middle years can be wonderful — in many cases, the kids aren't there any more to peek in," she says. Sex manuals help, but "it's your way of thinking that really makes a difference."

Bring on the birthday candles!

Storytelling leads to books

Child's success with reading has start at home

by RICHARD ARMOUR

Parents are, or should be, concerned about each child's progress in learning to read at school. But you are unequipped with the materials for the reading test, including a comparison with children in the same class and with those in other schools.

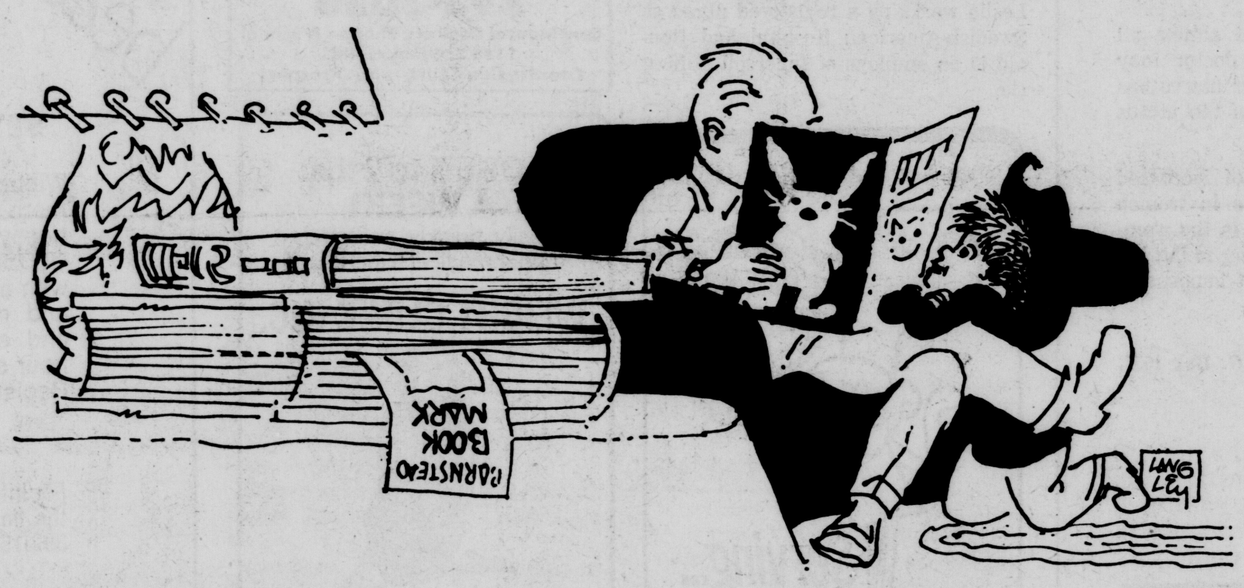
Morever, to give a reading test at home would be about the quickest way to turn your child away from reading for pleasure. And reading for pleasure is probably the surest way to establish the all-important reading habit.

This doesn't mean you cannot find out whether your child is learning to read at school. Nor does it mean you cannot give some sort of reading test, so long as it's a subtle test and probably not called a test at all. It may even have the elements of a game.

Anyhow, your child may be at a school where the results of reading tests are sent to parents, perhaps twice a year. If not, you could get in touch with the teacher and ask about your child's reading ability. Or, if you have the time, you could volunteer as a teacher's aide and see (and hear) your child and others in the class perform their reading assignments.

The first indication to me that my granddaughter was learning to read, and enjoying it, came late in kindergarten or early in first grade. Previously she was always begging me to tell her a story. I was happy to be asked, since it was flattering to be thought such a good storyteller. Also, I liked to have her sit on my lap in a chair or alongside me on a sofa while I was telling a story.

BUT I GOT TO THE point where I couldn't think of another story. I had to tell one of the old stories again, if I could remember it, or suggest we go for a walk or play a game. I began to look forward to the day when she could read for herself. She would look at the pictures in a book, but she would not let me read to her.



"Tell me a story, Gimp," she would say, and there was no use arguing with her.

Then came the time when she would pick up a book herself, a book whose illustrations had caught her fancy, and she would ask me to read it to her. This was a great step forward. Besides, she recognized letters when I pointed them out. Apparently she had learned the alphabet, but she knew only a few words.

All of a sudden there was a dramatic change. She brought me a simply written, well-illustrated book, but instead of asking me to read it to her, she started right out reading it to me. I had to help her with a word now and then, but only when she struggled with it and finally asked me.

I showed surprise, and I complimented her. I don't know which one of us was more pleased. When she finished reading the book, a small book that had pictures that took up a large part of each page, I complimented her again. In fact, I indicated amazement.

OBVIOUSLY PLEASED, she jumped up and went to get another book. I could see that my days of reading aloud to her were over, and I felt a mixture of pride and regret, but mostly pride.

How do I know whether she is learning to read at school? Of course I know she now can read, and someone must have taught her — I didn't.

Now I am interested in what progress she is making, and whether she is reading more difficult books. Without seeming to be too probing or inquisitive, but displaying genuine interest, I ask her what she is reading these days in school. And, just as once she had asked me to read to her, now I ask her to read to me.

We still sit close together. She asks me less and less often what a word means. She enjoys reading to me and also enjoys my expressions of pleasure and my spoken and unspoken indications of pride.

Along with games and clothes, I give her books for Christmas and for her birthday, books that have become classics and that I hope she will like as much as I did when I first read them.

MY TEST OF HER reading skill is to keep increasing the level of the books I give her, and to see whether she can read them, understand them and enjoy them. She has a library card, too, and I can tell how her reading is improving when I notice the books she selects and brings home.

As I have suggested from my own experience, it is not difficult to find out whether your child (or grandchild) is learning to read, and learning to read with more understanding and faster.

I think you need (1) to give the time to reading aloud and being read to, (2) to show pleasure and pride, (3) to start building up the child's own library, and (4) to set an example by having books around and being seen reading instead of always watching television.

In this way you and the teacher work together to achieve one of the basic educational goals: learning the first of the "three R's."

Flannel a poor fabric for rain wear

Eunice Farmer

Sew simple

Dear Eunice Farmer: I was about to purchase some flannel for an evening cape, but the salesperson told me it would rain spot. Does all woolen material rain spot?—Mrs. V.O.D.

Dear Mrs. V.O.D.: Flannel is the worst offender for water spotting. If you intend the evening cape for rain, I would suggest using water-repellent poplin, velvet, tweed or any patterned-type wool.

If you still prefer the flannel, you may spray it with water-repellent coating.

Dear Eunice Farmer: I've read your column for several years, although I could not stitch a seam. And now, what with the prohibitive price of clothes, I want to try my hand at making something for myself. I wear a size 8 in ready-to-wear, but when I compare my measurements with the pattern, it seems I need a larger pattern. Just what size pattern should I purchase?—Nancy L.

Dear Nancy: Since there is no standardization in sizing of ready-to-wear garments, you won't be able to use that as a guide at all.

I have always used a high bust measurement as a guide. Measure just above the bust and then take a second measurement at the largest part of the bust. If there is only two inches difference, you will usually purchase a pattern according to the high bust measurement. If there is four inches difference, though, you will have to get the next size, which is still two inches smaller than your actual bust measurement.

Naturally, everyone must make some pattern changes to correspond with their body — a pattern is only a basic guide and cannot fit everyone. It is much easier to add to the waist and hips of a pattern than to change the neckline and upper body. I would recommend that since you're a beginner, you get your "feet wet" with a pattern that is not too fitted and has very simple lines.

I also have always recommended sewing lessons if at all possible. There is nothing more satisfying than a well-made garment that even your best friend doesn't think you made because it is so great looking.

Dear Readers: Watch for the return of cuffs on pants. A few top designers are just beginning to show them, and it could be the new trend. When sewing cuffed pants, you may wish to add three to five inches additional length to your pants, depending on the width of the cuffs. You will need twice the width of the finished cuffs plus one inch. For example, if the cuffs are two inches wide, you must allow five inches more than the finished length. If you decide later you don't want the cuffs, you can always cut off the excess length.

(Remember: When purchasing your fabric, you will need to figure in the extra length.)

"When sewing canvas or any heavy, closely woven fabric, run a bar of soap over the seam line before stitching. The needle will enter the heavy fabric easier and it won't break as easily."

Beauty after 35? It takes activity—maybe surgery

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

She sweeps into the Ritz-Carlton cafe, all smash and dash and verve. Her hair is soft blonde, curving nonchalantly around a tanned face that evokes images of long bubble baths and weekends in Connecticut. The eyeglasses are large and fashionable; the gem earrings subdued and expensive.

It comes as no surprise when she orders an iced tea (no sugar) and a crabmeat salad with Russian dressing. This is the type of woman who would consider "banana split" just short of obscene.

There's no doubt about it: Eileen Ford, head of the Ford Modeling Agency in New York and author of such how-to books as "A More Perfect You in 21 Days," knows her stuff. When she sets aside her avocado to talk about yoga breathing exercises, 14-day vegetarian diets and the importance of an active sex life, you listen.

ESPECIALLY IF you're approaching the years when hot flashes, crow's feet and middle-aged spread become more than cliches — the time that Mrs. Ford says can wreak havoc on any woman.

"Middle-aged women are truly the forgotten generation," she says. "No one pays any attention to them . . . they don't have any guides to follow."

No wonder. After all, who wouldn't feel forgotten when a stable of slim young models like Lauren Hutton and Susan Blakely (both Ford discoveries) present their flat stomachs and sun-streaked hair as a national ideal?

Mrs. Ford doesn't deny that attractive young girls are at a definite advantage: "You can't help being wistful when you hear a Benny Goodman record and then look at your own kids." But her latest book, "Beauty Now and Forever . . . Secrets of Beauty after 35" (Simon and Schuster) is chock full of advice on adapting professional beauty standards to those of car-pooling, grocery-shopping suburbia.

"WHEN YOU LOOK your best, people are attracted to you . . . it's as simple as that," she says. "The crisis years start the day you stop taking care of yourself . . . it's up to you to keep yourself young."

Developing that positive attitude, she says, depends on your ability to take a good, long, critical look at yourself — eating habits, hairstyle, personality. If you're succumbing to rich souffles and you don't know who Bianca Jagger is, you're out of it.

"You've got to keep active and on top of things — it's the only way," Mrs. Ford declares. She ought to know: she works seven days a week on her modeling agency, is passionately involved in child and wife abuse laws, write and lectures on beauty, and still finds time to keep up a large flower garden in Connecticut. To top it off, she's never watched a soap opera!

BUT IMMERSING yourself in mental and physical activity won't do a thing for grey hair and wrinkles. Mrs. Ford knows it, and she's armed with solutions ranging from the right shade of hair color to chin lifts, eye lifts and nose bobs.

"I'm all in favor of cosmetic surgery if it's really needed," she says. "If I had large, pendulous breasts, I would go to the best hospital around and get it taken care of. It's a serious decision — not the kind of thing you shop around for."

And how does she feel about going under the knife herself?

"I haven't gotten up enough courage yet. I was going to get my chin done this fall, but the fence needs fixing first."

If you'd love to get rid of that spare tire, but are worried about being labeled as a vain, egotistical female, forget it: "Yes, there is such a thing as being too concerned with your appearance, but most people are afraid to be concerned at all," she says. "You have to give it a try, because if you don't, someone else will."

AHA — THERE'S the rub. According to Mrs. Ford, the "Seven (or 17) Year Itch" is as catching today as it was when Marilyn Monroe did the scratching. If you stay on top of the battle, you're all right. If not . . .

"It's the beginning of the end the day you say, 'I'm too tired,' " she says firmly. "It's a fact of life that men want women to meet their needs . . . if you can't, of course they'll look for younger women.

"Marriage in the middle years can be wonderful — in many cases, the kids aren't there any more to peek in," she says. Sex manuals help, but "it's your way of thinking that really makes a difference."

Bring on the birthday candles!

"BEAUTY NOW AND FOREVER," Eileen Ford's guide to keeping young after 35, offers readers tips on everything from health spas and vegetable diets to improving a negative mental attitude.

Storytelling leads to books

Child's success with reading has start at home

by RICHARD ARMOUR

Parents are, or should be, concerned about each child's progress in learning to read at school. But you are unequipped with the materials for the reading test, including a comparison with children in the same class and with those in other schools.

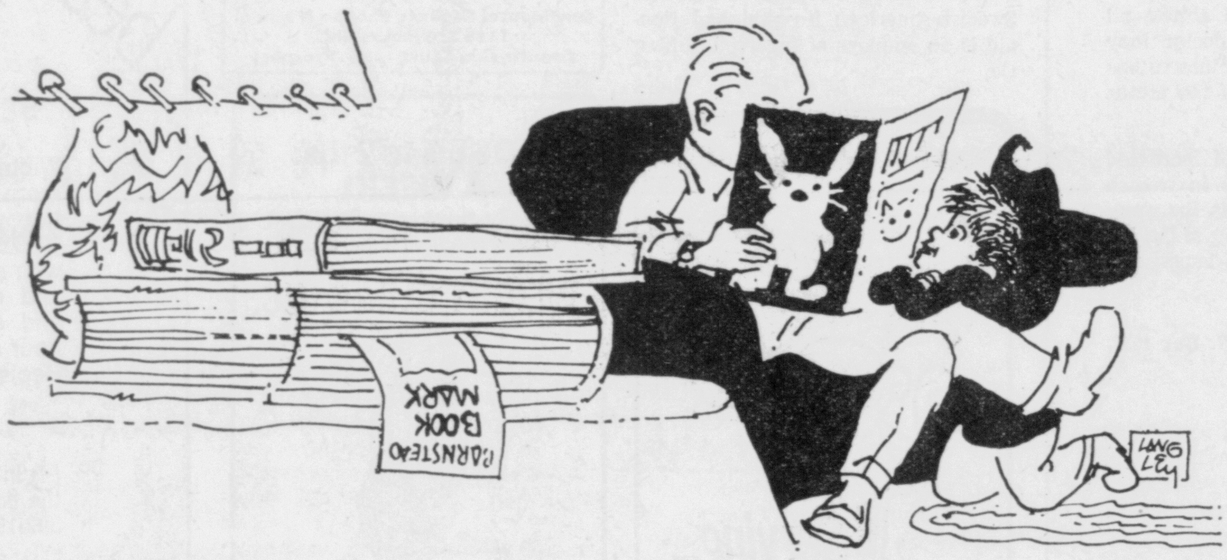
Morever, to give a reading test at home would be about the quickest way to turn your child away from reading for pleasure. And reading for pleasure is probably the surest way to establish the all-important reading habit.

This doesn't mean you cannot find out whether your child is learning to read at school. Nor does it mean you cannot give some sort of reading test, so long as it's a subtle test and probably not called a test at all. It may even have the elements of a game.

Anyhow, your child may be at a school where the results of reading tests are sent to parents, perhaps twice a year. If not, you could get in touch with the teacher and ask about your child's reading ability. Or, if you have the time, you could volunteer as a teacher's aide and see (and hear) your child and others in the class perform their reading assignments.

The first indication to me that my granddaughter was learning to read, and enjoying it, came late in kindergarten or early in first grade. Previously she was always begging me to tell her a story. I was happy to be asked, since it was flattering to be thought such a good storyteller. Also, I liked to have her sit on my lap in a chair or alongside me on a sofa while I was telling a story.

BUT I GOT TO THE point where I couldn't think of another story. I had to tell one of the old stories again, if I could remember it, or suggest we go for a walk or play a game. I began to look forward to the day when she could read for herself. She would look at the pictures in a book, but she would not let me read to her.



"Tell me a story, Gimp," she would say, and there was no use arguing with her.

Then came the time when she would pick up a book herself, a book whose illustrations had caught her fancy, and she would ask me to read it to her. This was a great step forward. Besides, she recognized letters when I pointed them out. Apparently she had learned the alphabet, but she knew only a few words.

All of a sudden there was a dramatic change. She brought me a simply written, well-illustrated book, but instead of asking me to read it to her, she started right out reading it to me. I had to help her with a word now and then, but only when she struggled with it and finally asked me.

I showed surprise, and I complimented her. I don't know which one of us was more pleased. When she finished reading the book, a small book that had pictures that took up a large part of each page, I complimented her again. In fact, I indicated amazement.

OBVIOUSLY PLEASED, she jumped up and went to get another book. I could see that my days of reading aloud to her were over, and I felt a mixture of pride and regret, but mostly pride.

How do I know whether she is learning to read at school? Of course I know she now can read, and someone must have taught her — I didn't.

Now I am interested in what progress she is making, and whether she is reading more difficult books. Without seeming to be too probing or inquisitive, but displaying genuine interest, I ask her what she is reading these days in school. And, just as once she had asked me to read to her, now I ask her to read to me.

We still sit close together. She asks me less and less often what a word means. She enjoys reading to me and also enjoys my expressions of pleasure and my spoken and unspoken indications of pride.

Along with games and clothes, I give her books for Christmas and for her birthday, books that have become classics and that I hope she will like as much as I did when I first read them.

MY TEST OF HER reading skill is to keep increasing the level of the books I give her, and to see whether she can read them, understand them and enjoy them. She has a library card, too, and I can tell how her reading is improving when I notice the books she selects and brings home.

Sugar in blood high at age 50 and older

Which is more serious, sugar in the urine or sugar in the blood? I have been considered a diabetic and would like to know. I'm 70 and have never had any of the symptoms of diabetes that you hear about. My sugar count is within the normal range and I have no sugar in my urine.

It sounds like you have nothing to worry about. The blood glucose (sugar) normally is higher in people over 50 and the normal range includes higher levels each decade. I'm not convinced this is good. Higher levels may be considered normal because they are common, but I would prefer that people continue to have lower levels as they get older — if they are to be in optimal health, not just normal in the sense of a frequent occurrence.

The blood glucose level has to be around 160 or 170 to result in spilling glucose in the urine. This is a higher level than you should have in the blood except as a peak value after ingesting a lot of glucose as for a glucose test. The blood test really is the most accurate indicator of whether or not you have diabetes but the urine test is adequate for home control of diabetes in most cases.

Many diabetics do not have symptoms when the disease is first diagnosed by blood tests or from sugar in the urine. As the disease advances the person then may experience fatigue, weight loss, frequency of urination, drinking lots of water and other symptoms.

To give you more complete information I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-11, Diabetes: Diagnosis, Prevention and Management. Sugar can occur in the urine without diabetes. This can occur after consuming lots of sweets or with stress or during pregnancy.

I am a middle-aged woman suffering from the symptoms associated with an artificial menopause — hot flashes, headaches, insomnia, sweats, palpitations, etc. — resulting from the removal of healthy ovaries during a recent hysterectomy for fibroid tumors of the uterus.

How long does it take normally for the body to adjust to these conditions? The prescribed low dosage of Premarin has not helped alleviate the symptoms as yet.

It is an individual matter. Some women produce enough female hormones from the tiny adrenal glands over the kidneys to avoid severe reactions and others do not. Then all of the symptoms people attribute to the menopause are not always caused by menopause.

Hot flashes are one of the specific symptoms that almost all doctors agree can be alleviated by estrogen. Your doctor may need to increase your medicine for a while. Since your uterus has been removed the possible increased risk of cancer of the uterus from taking female hormones has been eliminated.

More recent studies confirm that the small risk of increased strokes or heart attacks or other vascular problems in women taking female hormones are particularly apt to occur in the women who take female hormones and smoke, too. Smoking is the big factor. So, I would advise you to stop smoking if that happens to be one of your habits.

Emergency phone list should be readable

Dear Roberta: You probably have a list of emergency telephone numbers. Am I out of line by asking what's on it?—Concerned Mother.

Not at all. My list was drawn up mainly for baby-sitters. It's typed on a six by nine-inch file card and taped beside the phone (in the kitchen, of course). The identifications are typed in capital letters, and I try not to clutter up the card. When penciled changes or additions become humersou, it's time to update the card. Across the top is the most important notation. It says, "THIS IS . . ." followed by my address. (Don't assume a sitter has memorized your house number.) Reading down the current card, I see — after fire, police and ambulance — husband's office, pediatrician's office and home, poison control center, plastic surgeon (for stitches), orthopedist (for broken bones), eye doctor, neighbor who has key, other good neighbors, family, drugstore and veterinarian. On the right of the card are lists telling where flashlights, candles and fire extinguishers are. Don't forget to go over your own list with every new sitter.

Dear Roberta: I reversed your instructions on hurrying up drying by adding dry bath towels to the dryer, to get the opposite effect. By accident, a pair of polyester slacks went into the dryer with the rest of the laundry. When I found them, they were very wrinkled. As you know, polyester is tricky to iron. Hoping to dampen them, I put the dry slacks back in the dryer, this time with two wet bath towels. In 10 minutes I retrieved them. No need to press them. Most of the wrinkles had disappeared.—Eugenie Dumas.

Weddings

Leslie Lynn Pociask-Ronald Ross Edwards

The bride's mother provided the wedding dress and the bride's cousin, Ed Miller, sang an original composition at the wedding of Leslie Lynn Pociask, Mount Prospect and Ronald Ross Edwards, Rockford. The couple were married Aug. 27 in St. Raymond's Church, Mount Prospect.

Leslie's dress of ivory satin, worn by her mother 26 years ago, was complemented with a cathedral length veil made by the bride. She also carried miniature orchids, stephanotis, roses and baby's breath.

Sandy Pociask, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Vicki, junior bridesmaid, and Karen Kramer, Schaumburg; the groom's sister, Lucille Johnson, Rockford, Vicki Vaughn, Charlotte N.C.; Robin Berkheimer and Debra Sprague, Rockford. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore blue and peach plaid gowns and carried baskets filled with carnations and roses.

MARK DAMON, Durand, Ill., was the best man. Other groomsmen were the groom's brother, Dennis, the groom's cousin, Edward; the groom's brother-in-law, Dave Johnson; and Dan Barthelman, all of Rockford; Bob Schmid, Madison, Wis., and Scott Alsbury, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Following the reception at Starlite Inn, Schiller Park, the couple left for a camping trip in the Grand Teton National Park. They are at home in Rockford where they are both employed.

Leslie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Pociask, Mount Prospect, graduated from Prospect High School and Swedish-American Hospital School of Nursing in Rockford. Ronald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvan M. Edwards, Rockford. Leslie works as a registered nurse at Swedish-American Hospital and Ronald is an employe of Ingersoll Milling Co.

In a rainbow setting at 2:30 in the afternoon, Colleen McDonald and Donald R. Gould Jr. were wed Aug. 20 in St. Alphonsus Church, Prospect Heights.

Their marriage further strengthened ties between two Prospect Heights families as Colleen's brother, Michael, of Wheeling, is married to Don's sister, Nancy, and it was through Michael and Nancy that the pair met.

Colleen's parents are the senior Michael B. McDonalds and Don's are the senior Donald R. Goulds.

Michael Jr. and Nancy also had a part in the wedding service, Michael as best man and Nancy as a bridesmaid along with the bride's cousins, Deb and Barb Underwood of Arlington Heights; Don's sister Diane, and Sally Weber, Prospect Heights. Kathy Rodgers, Prospect Heights, was the maid of honor.

COLLEEN'S BROTHER, Keith; the groom's cousins, Scott Ness and Rick Kuczmarski, Chicago; Rancy Roth, Prospect Heights; and Bill Weber, Arlington Heights, helped seat guests.

Colleen's bridal gown was of lustrous crystal appliqued in Venise lace. A matching Camelot cap held her veil and she carried stephanotis with daisies in rainbow colors.

Her attendants were dressed in flowered prints, each in a different rainbow shade of blue, green, yellow, pink, apricot and violet. Shannon's dress was blue and styled like the attendants'. The maids carried pink roses and daisies to match their gowns, while the flower girl had daisies in each rainbow shade and pink roses.

THERE WERE 250 guests at the evening reception held at Allgauer's Fireside Restaurant, Northbrook. The newlyweds then took a traditional honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and Canada before settling in Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mar. Donald R. Gould Jr.

Colleen, a '77 graduate of Hersey High School, works at the Bank of Palatine, and Don, a '76 graduate of Oklahoma State University, with degrees in fire protection and engineering technology, is employed by Hoffman Estates Fire Department. He also graduated from Hersey.

YMCA to host fest and family fun night

The Live Y'ers of Northwest Suburban YMCA will sponsor an Oktoberfest and family night Friday, Oct. 14 at the "Y," Des Plaines.

The "fest" will include swimming, movies and gym activities, and for those who wish, there will be a dinner of bratwurst, sauerkraut, German potato salad, rye bread, apply strudel and root beer, coffee or milk. Cost of the dinner is $3 for persons of all ages.

First dinner serving will be from 5:15 to 6 p.m.; the second from 6 to 6:45 p.m.

Women of Illinois topic of seminar

Adade Wheeler, author of "The Roads They Made: Women in Illinois History," will conduct an all-day seminar, "Women of Illinois," Thursday at Harper College, Palatine. The seminar will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Board Room, Building A. Tuition is $10 and includes lunch.

Ms. Wheeler, who recently returned from a visit to Cuba where she completed research on women of the Americas, will show slides and talk about the challenge and diversity of women in the development of the state of Illinois.

Since your uterus has been removed the possible increased risk of cancer of the uterus from taking female hormones has been eliminated.

More recent studies confirm that the small risk of increased strokes or heart attacks or other vascular problems in women taking female hormones are particularly apt to occur in the women who take female hormones and smoke, too. Smoking is the big factor. So, I would advise you to stop smoking if that happens to be one of your habits.

Roberta Ritz Mathews

The homeline

Emergency phone list should be readable

Dear Roberta: You probably have a list of emergency telephone numbers. Am I out of line by asking what's on it?—Concerned Mother.

Not at all. My list was drawn up mainly for baby-sitters. It's typed on a six by nine-inch file card and taped beside the phone (in the kitchen, of course). The identifications are typed in capital letters, and I try not to clutter up the card. When penciled changes or additions become humersou, it's time to update the card. Across the top is the most important notation. It says, "THIS IS . . ." followed by my address. (Don't assume a sitter has memorized your house number.) Reading down the current card, I see — after fire, police and ambulance — husband's office, pediatrician's office and home, poison control center, plastic surgeon (for stitches), orthopedist (for broken bones), eye doctor, neighbor who has key, other good neighbors, family, drugstore and veterinarian. On the right of the card are lists telling where flashlights, candles and fire extinguishers are. Don't forget to go over your own list with every new sitter.

Dear Roberta: I reversed your instructions on hurrying up drying by adding dry bath towels to the dryer, to get the opposite effect. By accident, a pair of polyester slacks went into the dryer with the rest of the laundry. When I found them, they were very wrinkled. As you know, polyester is tricky to iron. Hoping to dampen them, I put the dry slacks back in the dryer, this time with two wet bath towels. In 10 minutes I retrieved them. No need to press them. Most of the wrinkles had disappeared.—Eugenie Dumas.

Dear Roberta: A cottonball dabbed with rubbing alcohol will remove rings from stainless steel pans without scratching or dulling the metal.—Faith Childs.

Weddings

Leslie Lynn Pociask-Ronald Ross Edwards

The bride's mother provided the wedding dress and the bride's cousin, Ed Miller, sang an original composition at the wedding of Leslie Lynn Pociask, Mount Prospect and Ronald Ross Edwards, Rockford. The couple were married Aug. 27 in St. Raymond's Church, Mount Prospect.

Leslie's dress of ivory satin, worn by her mother 26 years ago, was complemented with a cathedral length veil made by the bride. She also carried miniature orchids, stephanotis, roses and baby's breath.

Sandy Pociask, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the bride's sisters, Vicki, junior bridesmaid, and Karen Kramer, Schaumburg; the groom's sister, Lucille Johnson, Rockford, Vicki Vaughn, Charlotte N.C.; Robin Berkheimer and Debra Sprague, Rockford. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore blue and peach plaid gowns and carried baskets filled with carnations and roses.

MARK DAMON, Durand, Ill., was the best man. Other groomsmen were the groom's brother, Dennis, the groom's cousin, Edward; the groom's brother-in-law, Dave Johnson; and Dan Barthelman, all of Rockford; Bob Schmid, Madison, Wis., and Scott Alsbury, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Following the reception at Starlite Inn, Schiller Park, the couple left for a camping trip in the Grand Teton National Park. They are at home in Rockford where they are both employed.

Leslie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Pociask, Mount Prospect, graduated from Prospect High School and Swedish-American Hospital School of Nursing in Rockford. Ronald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvan M. Edwards, Rockford. Leslie works as a registered nurse at Swedish-American Hospital and Ronald is an employe of Ingersoll Milling Co.

In a rainbow setting at 2:30 in the afternoon, Colleen McDonald and Donald R. Gould Jr. were wed Aug. 20 in St. Alphonsus Church, Prospect Heights.

Their marriage further strengthened ties between two Prospect Heights families as Colleen's brother, Michael, of Wheeling, is married to Don's sister, Nancy, and it was through Michael and Nancy that the pair met.

Colleen's parents are the senior Michael B. McDonalds and Don's are the senior Donald R. Goulds.

Michael Jr. and Nancy also had a part in the wedding service, Michael as best man and Nancy as a bridesmaid along with the bride's cousins, Deb and Barb Underwood of Arlington Heights; Don's sister Diane, and Sally Weber, Prospect Heights. Kathy Rodgers, Prospect Heights, was the maid of honor.

COLLEEN'S BROTHER, Keith; the groom's cousins, Scott Ness and Rick Kuczmarski, Chicago; Rancy Roth, Prospect Heights; and Bill Weber, Arlington Heights, helped seat guests.

Colleen's bridal gown was of lustrous crystal appliqued in Venise lace. A matching Camelot cap held her veil and she carried stephanotis with daisies in rainbow colors.

Her attendants were dressed in flowered prints, each in a different rainbow shade of blue, green, yellow, pink, apricot and violet. Shannon's dress was blue and styled like the attendants'. The maids carried pink roses and daisies to match their gowns, while the flower girl had daisies in each rainbow shade and pink roses.

THERE WERE 250 guests at the evening reception held at Allgauer's Fireside Restaurant, Northbrook. The newlyweds then took a traditional honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and Canada before settling in Arlington Heights.

Mr. and Mar. Donald R. Gould Jr.

Colleen, a '77 graduate of Hersey High School, works at the Bank of Palatine, and Don, a '76 graduate of Oklahoma State University, with degrees in fire protection and engineering technology, is employed by Hoffman Estates Fire Department. He also graduated from Hersey.

Chess Day open house Saturday

Saturday has been designated National Chess Day and in observance the Mount Prospect Chess Club is planning an open house at the Mount Prospect Community Center, 600 Seegwun.

Chess in the United States, in spite of Bobby Fischer's five years of seclusion, is still alive and vital, said Robert E. Spaulding, president of the local club. Fischer would not accept the rules and regulations of the World Chess Federation for the defense of his title in 1975, even for an offer of $10 million, and the USSR again gained the World Chess Championship title by default.

Fischer lives almost in seclusion in Pasadena, Calif., reportedly studying and analyzing games but giving no indication that he will ever play in formal competitions again.

HEADQUARTERS of the United States Chess Federation, founded in 1939, is in Windsor, N.Y., where a staff of 25 maintains records for 48,000 members and calculates ratings for members on a computer system, pairs entrants by mail, maintains a catalog of books and equipment and publishes a monthly periodical.

Although there are fewer weekend tournaments now than in 1972, tournaments are drawing more players than ever before. Nearly 1,000 were entered in the 1977 World Open in July in Philadelphia.

Last year the federation inaugurated the National Chess League, which stages telephone contests throughout the United States. Membership in this league doubled the first year.

NATIONAL CHESS Day kicks off the federation's first official membership drive in nearly 10 years, and members of the local club are inviting all in the community to the open house from 2 to 5 p.m.

On exhibit will be displays of chess pieces and clocks, bits of chess history and opening moves. The 30 members of the club also will serve coffee and cookies.

Forums on ERA

Is ERA the wonder drug that will free women from discrimination? Or is it the scourge of the sexes, designed to send women to war and unisex rest rooms?

Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Buffalo Grove League of Women Voters will help answer questions about ERA and focus a discussion on the positive and negative angles of the amendment in an effort to deal with popular misconceptions.

The Tuesday meeting will be held at 9 a.m. in the Congregational Church, Arlington Heights, and the Wednesday evening meeting in the home of a member. Those wishing location of this meeting may call 541-7874.

At both meetings a representative of Shelter, Inc. will speak to the need for foster homes in the Northwest suburbs. Shelter is a local child care service with a crisis intervention center located in Arlington Heights.

Help for abused women

The possibility of establishing a shelter in Des Plaines for abused women will be the topic of Wednesday's meeting of the League of Women Voters of Des Plaines.

Jean Bailey, one of the Des Plaines members who visited the Elgin Shelter for Women, will describe the problems faced by abused women, why they need help and how it can be given. The first priority set by Ms. Bailey is establishment of a hot line.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the home of Beth Dlouhy, 1741 Illinois.

Dick Kay

Talk on cross collection

Pastor Warren K. Sigalt, ecumenical chaplain at Bethany Terrace Retirement and Nuring Home, Morton Grove, will speak to "My Hobby, the Cross" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the fellowship hall of First United Methodist Church, Des Plaines.

The United Methodist Women of First Church is sponsoring the program instead of the regular October meeting, and it is open to all church members and their friends.

A Lutheran minister, Pastor Sigwalt has traveled extensively in Europe, Russia, Canada and Mexico and in 1977 visited the Holy Land. He has been collecting crosses for nearly 30 years and numbers more than 900 in his collection.

In addition to serving as chaplain at Bethany Terrace, he serves as part-time pastor of Mayfair Presbyterian Church.

Dick Kay guest speaker

Political analyst Dick Kay, WMAQ, Channel 5, will be guest speaker at Maine Township Republican Woman's Club's annual Candidate's Brunch Sunday, at the Sheraton O'Hare North.

Kay, a Des Plaines resident, will analyze the current political scene for members of the club, their husbands and friends. All area residents are invited to meet candidates whose names will be on the primary ballot next spring.

Tickets to the brunch, which also will feature musical entertainment, are $10 and may be purchased by calling Vivian Weaver, 824-6471.

KATY LUTHER, portrayed by Marie Noll, shows a book on "The Reformation" to Alyce Truelson in an observance of the 35th anniversary of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League. "Reformation Fair," which features a dialog as might occur between Mrs. Luther and a 20th Century woman, will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, Prospect Heights. Sponsored by the Women's Guild of the church, the fair also will feature a display of antique Bibles.

Wanted: volunteers

Schools in Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Rolling Meadows need clerical help for typing, filing and other duties in school rooms, offices and libraries.

Volunteer Service Bureau also is recruiting chaperones for high school field trips to museums, zoos and shows.

Boy Scout and Girl Scouts can use nonparents as troop leaders, arts and crafts demonstrators and equipment checkers.

In the Schaumburg/Hoffman Estates area volunteers are needed to work with the Boys Club (age 7 to 15) in crafts, sports, games.

In the Hanover Park area, the General Educational Development program needs tutors evenings for math and English and the U.S. Constitution.

In the Mount Prospect area volunteers are needed to participate in the "Motor Mom" program. Very little time is required. Also needed are babysitters while the "Motor Moms" work with children and have preschoolers.

The Volunteer Service Bureau Central Office needs a volunteer typist for a few hours a week.

THE DAILY HERALD

Chess Day open house Saturday

Saturday has been designated National Chess Day and in observance the Mount Prospect Chess Club is planning an open house at the Mount Prospect Community Center, 600 See-Gwun.

Chess in the United States, in spite of Bobby Fischer's five years of seclusion, is still alive and vital, said Robert E. Spaulding, president of the local club. Fischer would not accept the rules and regulations of the World Chess Federation for the defense of his title in 1975, even for an offer of $10 million, and the USSR again gained the World Chess Championship title by default.

Fischer lives almost in seclusion in Pasadena, Calif., reportedly studying and analyzing games but giving no indication that he will ever play in formal competitions again.

HEADQUARTERS of the United States Chess Federation, founded in 1939, is in Windsor, N.Y., where a staff of 25 maintains records for 48,000 members and calculates ratings for members on a computer system, pairs entrants by mail, maintains a catalog of books and equipment and publishes a monthly periodical.

Although there are fewer weekend tournaments now than in 1972, tournaments are drawing more players than ever before. Nearly 1,000 were entered in the 1977 World Open in July in Philadelphia.

Last year the federation inaugurated the National Chess League, which stages telephone contests throughout the United States. Membership in this league doubled the first year.

NATIONAL CHESS Day kicks off the federation's first official membership drive in nearly 10 years, and members of the local club are inviting all in the community to the open house from 2 to 5 p.m.

On exhibit will be displays of chess pieces and clocks, bits of chess history and opening moves. The 30 members of the club also will serve coffee and cookies.

Forums on ERA

Is ERA the wonder drug that will free women from discrimination? Or is it the scourge of the sexes, designed to send women to war and unisex rest rooms?

Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect-Buffalo Grove League of Women Voters will help answer questions about ERA and focus a discussion on the positive and negative angles of the amendment in an effort to deal with popular misconceptions.

The Tuesday meeting will be held at 9 a.m. in the Congregational Church, Arlington Heights, and the Wednesday evening meeting in the home of a member. Those wishing location of this meeting may call 541-7874.

At both meetings a representative of Shelter, Inc. will speak to the need for foster homes in the Northwest suburbs. Shelter is a local child care service with a crisis intervention center located in Arlington Heights.

Help for abused women

The possibility of establishing a shelter in Des Plaines for abused women will be the topic of Wednesday's meeting of the League of Women Voters of Des Plaines.

Jean Bailey, one of the Des Plaines members who visited the Elgin Shelter for Women, will describe the problems faced by abused women, why they need help and how it can be given. The first priority set by Ms. Bailey is establishment of a hot line.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the home of Beth Dlouhy, 1741 Illinois.

Talk on cross collection

Pastor Warren K. Sigalt, ecumenical chaplain at Bethany Terrace Retirement and Nuring Home, Morton Grove, will speak to "My Hobby, the Cross" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the fellowship hall of First United Methodist Church, Des Plaines.

The United Methodist Women of First Church is sponsoring the program instead of the regular October meeting, and it is open to all church members and their friends.

A Lutheran minister, Pastor Sigwalt has traveled extensively in Europe, Russia, Canada and Mexico and in 1977 visited the Holy Land. He has been collecting crosses for nearly 30 years and numbers more than 900 in his collection.

In addition to serving as chaplain at Bethany Terrace, he serves as part-time pastor of Mayfair Presbyterian Church.

Dick Kay

Dick Kay guest speaker

Political analyst Dick Kay, WMAQ, Channel 5, will be guest speaker at Maine Township Republican Woman's Club's annual Candidate's Brunch Sunday, at the Sheraton O'Hare North.

Kay, a Des Plaines resident, will analyze the current political scene for members of the club, their husbands and friends. All area residents are invited to meet candidates whose names will be on the primary ballot next spring.

Tickets to the brunch, which also will feature musical entertainment, are $10 and may be purchased by calling Vivian Weaver, 824-6471.

KATY LUTHER, portrayed by Marie Noll, shows a book on "The Reformation" to Alyce Truelson in an observance of the 35th anniversary of the Lutheran Women's Missionary League. "Reformation Fair," which features a dialog as might occur between Mrs. Luther and a 20th Century woman, will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, Prospect Heights. Sponsored by the Women's Guild of the church, the fair also will feature a display of antique Bibles.

'Soap' not pure, neither does it float

Television is really outdoing itself in the "profound questions and consequential subject matter" department this season.

The colossal worries of the world have been trivialized keenly in prime time and now on Tuesday nights we have taken to wondering whether Jodie will go through with his sex change operation, whether Burt will tell Mary that he killed her first husband and whether Chester ever will stop fooling around.

Ah, nothing like coming home from a trying day of work and losing yourself in the trifles and gossip of real life and love.

ABC DIDN'T CALL the show "Soap" for nothing. The nonsensical form of prime time soap opera unfortunately lacks the clever and subtle wit that Norman Lear gave his original night time soaper, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

Yes, those were the good old days when Chicago-area audiences would forego the dreadful realities of the 10 p.m. news to find out whether that red-headed, spacey heroine got rid of the waxy, yellow build-up on her kitchen floor.

Patrons of night time soapers can rejoice because King Lear tonight launches the newest of his continuing stories about the fictitious, backward town of Fernwood with "Forever Fernwood."

The title sounds like a battle cry, a pledge of allegiance for life, a confirmation that life in Fernwood does go on without dear Mary who has run off with a cop.

"FOREVER FERNWOOD," which will air weeknights at 10 p.m. on Channel 32, offers a whole batch of new, more perplexing questions but refrains from the outrageously zany stunts of Lear's summer talk show experiment, "Fernwood Tonight."

A few recognizable stars have been added to the old "Mary Hartman" cast, which remains intact except for Louise Lasser.

Tab Hunter stars as Martha Shumway's husband who, after falling into a vat of rustoleum, is transformed by way of plastic surgery into an unbearably handsome man. Shelley Fabares plays a former tennis star confined to a wheelchair by an accident on the courts with a romantic eye on newly-made bachelor Tom Hartman.

Judy Kahan, of "All's Fair" last season, is Miss Fabares' stuttering, clumsy sister and Fred Willard, Jerry Hubbard from "Fernwood Tonight," shows up in the new series as Loretta Haggers' road manager.

ASIDE FROM ALL that, the basic "Mary Hartman" mentality and wit shines through the slightly new arrangement and some of those pressing questions that never may be answered begin to persist with the first show.

Will Tom Hartman stop living out of his car and find the courage to return to the home where he and Mary shared a fleeting moment of happiness? Will Loretta confess to Charlie that she went to bed with a good looking stage technician (played by "Streets of San Francisco's" Richard Hatch) with her clothes on? Will Martha ever accept the new appearance of her husband?

Well, like always, stay tuned . . .

Peyton gets TV place

The nighttime soap opera that started it all in the 1960s, "Peyton Place," returns to television for a brief moment at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 5.

What better way to return from the grave of dead series after being off the air for eight years than with an intriguing "Murder in Peyton Place."

Now, if you recall, when we last left the town that lusted in its heart for gossip, Dr. Rossi was on trail for murder and the jury was just about ready to deliver its verdict when the final credits started rolling. America has been holding its breath ever since.

As the curtain goes up this time, we witness the slayings of Rodney Harrington and Allison MacKenzie (remember them?) as part of a diabilocal plot to destroy the small community.

What we've got is a former Payton Place resident, powerful and wealthy, who has secretly returned seeking revenge, and a cast of many of the original Peyton Placers' older but no wiser.

Ed Nelson is back as Dr. Rossi and Dorothy Malone is back as Constance MacKenzie while Chris Connelly shows up as Norman Harrington. The movie includes black and white flashbacks to the original three-times-a-week series.

"That kind of frantic pace is what killed the show after five years," Connelly said. "We had people planning their meals around us, but three times a week was too much."

With a renaissance in nighttime soap opera evidenced in the popularity of "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" and "Soap," Connelly hopes NBC periodically will continue airing a new "Peyton Place" drama with a murder here, a wedding there.

TV NOTES:

• You may not recognize the news tonight. Channel 7 unveils a new news set, soon to be followed by new outfits for the Eyewitness news team. Channel 5 begins its new co-anchor approach to the 10 p.m. news today with Ron Hunter and Don Craig, the new 4:30 p.m. duo on duty.

• CBS had the "Elvis in Concert" special today at 7 p.m. on Channel 2 planned before the singer's Aug. 16 death. It's a worthy tribute to the Rock and Roll star that shows him in concert only two months before his death.

• Chicago disc jockey Bob Sirrott hosts a telephone call-in show for teens following the rebroadcast of the WTTW documentary, "Guess Who's Pregnant," which airs at 9 p.m. on Channel 11.

Millionaire Peter Fonda still a rebel

by VERNON SCOTT

It's no easy thing for a man to be a millionaire and continue to be anti-establishment.

The situation might be likened to Billy Graham falling heir to a bordello or George Meany being elected president of General Motors.

The spirit is willing but the circumstances are compromising.

Such is the case with Peter Fonda. Since childhood he and sister Jane have been rebels without a pause. They come by their social consciousness naturally. Father Henry Fonda has spent a lifetime prodding the establishment.

BUT AMONG THIS enormously talented clan, only Peter is an out-and-out millionaire, thanks largely to "Easy Rider," his invention, production and starring vehicle.

Additional millions gushed forth from "Dirty Mary, Crazy Larry" and "Race with the Devil." His newest film, "Outlaw Blues," promises to perpetuate the cascade of gold.

Despite his wealth, Peter continues to assail the establishment on screen and off. He does not see any conflict between being a capitalist while railing against the shortcomings of capitalism.

Fonda, unlike most other millionaire actors, does not have a Beverly Hills mansion, impressive offices and a coterie of flunkies.

HE DOES OWN A $2 million yacht anchored in Hawaii and his garage houses a Cadillac El Dorado. But he bought the yacht as a home, "a safe place for my children to breathe good air and know the sea." The Cadillac is an investment because El Dorados are no longer made.

His permanent home is an 1872 homestead in Montana where he grows apples, hay, clover and barley and runs 40 head of cattle on a 118-acre spread without assistance. He and his second wife, Portia, do the irrigating and fence mending. They also grow their own vegetables.

Home is a log house 52 by 48 feet, one of 14 buildings on the property.

Peter has offices in a rundown, fly-blown Hollywood bungalow outside which he flies the American flag.

THE TALL (6-foot-2), slender Fonda spends as little time as possible in Southern California. When Peter is in town he visits with his father and sisetr and his children by his first marriage, Justin, 11, Bridgit, 13.

In "Outlaw Blues" Peter once again portrays an anti-establishmentarian, a jailbird who becomes a country-western singer-composer, but this time lightly and with dashes of comedy.

Not since his first movie "Tammy and the Doctor" in 1962, has Peter played an establishment figure in necktie and jacket.

"It's not something I designed," said Peter on a short visit to Hollywood. "They were films that came my way, the guy on the outside looking in.

"Maybe the roles reflect my own lifestyle but I'm now singing all the way to the bank."

FONDA LITERALLY is singing. He did his own vocals for "Outlaw Blues," fulfilling a lifelong ambition.

"I've always loved music and dreamed of recording an album one day," he said, grinning. "Everytime Dad got a role playing a musical instrument I'd practice right along with him.

"I learned to noodle around on the trumpet when he played one in 'On Our Merry Way.' And I played the bass when he did 'The Wrong Man' for Alfred Hitchcock. Now I'm singing and loving every minute of it."

Peter is a man of intense emotions yet manages to hang loose when he is among friends. His alert mind seizes on ideas quickly. His business acumen is almost as highly developed as his artistic endowment.

"DAD ONCE TOLD me I made more money from 'Easy Rider' than he did in all 125 pictures he's made in his career. But I wear different hats than Dad does, and he's not as interested in the business end of things as I am.

"As for the establishment, It hasn't shown me much originality in breaking the patterns of life either professionally or personally. So I go my own way.

"I came into show business via the womb. I find no mystique in glamor. I'm more interested in showing people what I can do than what I've got. My thrill in life is acting, doing the work, not talking about it.

"But I am in favor of individual accountability and responsibility without reliance on the government. Or does that sound like the establishment?" (UPI)

'Soap' not pure, neither does it float

Television is really outdoing itself in the "profound questions and consequential subject matter" department this season.

The colossal worries of the world have been trivialized keenly in prime time and now on Tuesday nights we have taken to wondering whether Jodie will go through with his sex change operation, whether Burt will tell Mary that he killed her first husband and whether Chester ever will stop fooling around.

Ah, nothing like coming home from a trying day of work and losing yourself in the trifles and gossip of real life and love.

ABC DIDN'T CALL the show "Soap" for nothing. The nonsensical form of prime time soap opera unfortunately lacks the clever and subtle wit that Norman Lear gave his original night time soaper, "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman."

Yes, those were the good old days when Chicago-area audiences would forego the dreadful realities of the 10 p.m. news to find out whether that red-headed, spacey heroine got rid of the waxy, yellow build-up on her kitchen floor.

Patrons of night time soapers can rejoice because King Lear tonight launches the newest of his continuing stories about the fictitious, backward town of Fernwood with "Forever Fernwood."

The title sounds like a battle cry, a pledge of allegiance for life, a confirmation that life in Fernwood does go on without dear Mary who has run off with a cop.

"FOREVER FERNWOOD," which will air weeknights at 10 p.m. on Channel 32, offers a whole batch of new, more perplexing questions but refrains from the outrageously zany stunts of Lear's summer talk show experiment, "Fernwood Tonight."

A few recognizable stars have been added to the old "Mary Hartman" cast, which remains intact except for Louise Lasser.

Tab Hunter stars as Martha Shumway's husband who, after falling into a vat of rustoleum, is transformed by way of plastic surgery into an unbearably handsome man. Shelley Fabares plays a former tennis star confined to a wheelchair by an accident on the courts with a romantic eye on newly-made bachelor Tom Hartman.

Judy Kahan, of "All's Fair" last season, is Miss Fabares' stuttering, clumsy sister and Fred Willard, Jerry Hubbard from "Fernwood Tonight," shows up in the new series as Loretta Haggers' road manager.

ASIDE FROM ALL that, the basic "Mary Hartman" mentality and wit shines through the slightly new arrangement and some of those pressing questions that never may be answered begin to persist with the first show.

Will Tom Hartman stop living out of his car and find the courage to return to the home where he and Mary shared a fleeting moment of happiness? Will Loretta confess to Charlie that she went to bed with a good looking stage technician (played by "Streets of San Francisco's" Richard Hatch) with her clothes on? Will Martha ever accept the new appearance of her husband?

Well, like always, stay tuned . . .

Peyton gets TV place

The nighttime soap opera that started it all in the 1960s, "Peyton Place," returns to television for a brief moment at 8 p.m. tonight on Channel 5.

What better way to return from the grave of dead series after being off the air for eight years than with an intriguing "Murder in Peyton Place."

Now, if you recall, when we last left the town that lusted in its heart for gossip, Dr. Rossi was on trail for murder and the jury was just about ready to deliver its verdict when the final credits started rolling. America has been holding its breath ever since.

As the curtain goes up this time, we witness the slayings of Rodney Harrington and Allison MacKenzie (remember them?) as part of a diabilocal plot to destroy the small community.

What we've got is a former Payton Place resident, powerful and wealthy, who has secretly returned seeking revenge, and a cast of many of the original Peyton Placers' older but no wiser.

Ed Nelson is back as Dr. Rossi and Dorothy Malone is back as Constance MacKenzie while Chris Connelly shows up as Norman Harrington. The movie includes black and white flashbacks to the original three-times-a-week series.

"Forever Furnwood"

"That kind of frantic pace is what killed the show after five years," Connelly said. "We had people planning their meals around us, but three times a week was too much."

With a renaissance in nighttime soap opera evidenced in the popularity of "Rich Man, Poor Man," "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" and "Soap," Connelly hopes NBC periodically will continue airing a new "Peyton Place" drama with a murder here, a wedding there.

TV NOTES:

• You may not recognize the news tonight. Channel 7 unveils a new news set, soon to be followed by new outfits for the Eyewitness news team. Channel 5 begins its new co-anchor approach to the 10 p.m. news today with Ron Hunter and Don Craig, the new 4:30 p.m. duo on duty.

• CBS had the "Elvis in Concert" special today at 7 p.m. on Channel 2 planned before the singer's Aug. 16 death. It's a worthy tribute to the Rock and Roll star that shows him in concert only two months before his death.

• Chicago disc jockey Bob Sirrott hosts a telephone call-in show for teens following the rebroadcast of the WTTW documentary, "Guess Who's Pregnant," which airs at 9 p.m. on Channel 11.

Houses shelter you from nature as well as those government taxes

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — One of the best tax shelters on which you'll ever lay eyes is your house. Home ownership is such a valued state that Congress has draped it in tax favors not granted any other investment.

Most of these breaks come into play when you sell the house. But to get the full profit that's coming to you, you have to keep track of the costs and expenses during all the years you live there. Fortunately, the record keeping needn't be elaborate, just the appropriate bills and documents tossed into a file or shoebox, to be resurrected when the time comes to sell. Here's your guide to the homeowner's tax shelter, according to the tax publisher, Prentice-Hall:

• Tax Defferal. If you sell your house at a profit, and put all the money toward buying a new house within 18 months. If you build, the new house must be started within 18 months and occupied within two years.

The tax on your profit isn't eliminated, it's just deferred, and continues to be deferred no matter how many moves you make. The full tax never falls due, unless you sell a house and don't buy a new one within the required period. At that point, you're taxed on the accumulated profit of all your past houses. If you ever buy a less expensive house than the one you sold, you're taxed on the portion of profit that's not reinvested in the new house.

If you own the house until your death, you never pay taxes on the profits. Whatever tax is due will be paid by your estate or your heirs when the house is sold.

Tax deferral applies only to your principal residence, be it a house, houseboat, or mobile home. If you sell a vacation home or investment property, the gain is taxed right away.

• Minimizing Profit. If your house cost $35,000 and you sell for $50,000, you may think you have a profit of $15,000. But your gain is smaller than that. You're allowed to subtract a long list of expenses from the selling price. This reduces the reported profit and greatly lowers the tax that's eventually paid.

Here's what you can deduct( (1) All costs of buying the house, like lawyer's fees, title insurance, survey, and so on. Keep your statement of closing costs, which shows all these items. (2) The cost of any improvements you made to the property, such as adding storm windows, finishing a basement, installing a new furnace, planting more trees. But you can't deduct routine maintenance costs like painting or repairs.) Keep the bills that prove these expenses. (3) All costs of selling the house including listing fees and brokerage commissions.

You also can deduct the cost of fixing up the house to make it more attractive to buyers, as long as the painting and repairing is done within 30 days of the sale. If it's done any earlier, it's considered routine maintenance and is not deductible. Again, keep the bills to prove these expenses.

Many, many homeowners report a larger gain than they have to when they sell their homes, simply because they didn't keep track of these deductible costs. The end result is a higher-than-necessary tax.

• Seniors. If you sell a house when you're 65 or older and the sales price (reduced by your expenses) is $45,000 or less, the entire gain is tax-free. If the price is higher, a portion of the gain is tax-free. The remaining portion can be tax-deferred, as usual, by using it to buy another house. To qualify for the senior citizen break, you have to have used the house for at least five out of the past eight years.

• Deducting A Loss. Normally, any loss you take when you sell your house is not deductible. But if you rent out the house before it's for sale, it becomes a business property. In that case you can deduct the house's loss in market value, starting from the date it became a business property. To prove the loss, have the house appraised before you start to rent. You can also deduct a loss on a house you inherit (even a house you're living in, provided that you put it up for sale right away).

Ask an accountant for help in reporting gains and losses on your house, or a house you inherit. His advice can save you a lot of money.

Experts share tips on resumes

Many job applicants unwittingly make boners on both their resumes and in job interviews that prevent them from finding new positions. What are some of the most common mistakes in Job hunting? United Press International asked the experts.

Arlene Covney, placement counselor, Career Blazers Agency Inc., New York City: "First of all, salary expectations often are very unrealistic. Most people will put down a very high salary requirement for their minimum when they haven't gone out and priced the market. When applicants indicate they want to work in a certain industry, they're so specific that they rule out other areas. On the other hand, some applicants are so general about fields of interest that they don't give the employment agency any direction. What hampers most people is that they simply don't have enough information.

"On resumes, many job seekers list their age, race, sex and marital status, which is a big mistake. It's against the law for employers and agencies to use this kind of information. A lot of people submit pictures with their resumes, which is a gimmick. Resumes often come in various sizes on different colored paper. They range from subtly impressive to outrageous and pompous.

"ON JOB INTERVIEWS, people either don't answer questions directly and project a poor image or oversell themselves. Most applicants lie about being fired. It's always hard to determine whether someone has been fired or laid off. Getting references from a former employer is difficult because of certain laws."

Robert Half, president, Robert Half Personnel Agencies New York City:

"Many job applicants hope gimmicks will land them a job. For example, about 25 years ago I received an envelope and opened up the resume inside. Out flew a tissue paper butterfly attached to a propeller which said, 'sales soar with Sam so-and-so.' I practically had a heart attack. The only way that man may have gotten a job was with a kook like himself.

"But gimmicks do work on rare occasions. A corporate treasurer who was also dog owner of some importance sent out a resume with a picture of his dogs on the top corner. Someone who also loved dogs saw the resume and liked it, and the applicant was hired. Personal touches are not recommended, however. They can narrow the field. It's very uncommon to find gimmicks in the profesional arena.

"A RESUME IS an ad, and an ad shouldn't be long. But some people submit resumes that are so detailed they look like sales literature. One man made up a resume with his picture imposed on a time magazine cover so he would look like Time's man of the year.

"Many people make harmless mistakes on resumes that are quite amusing. A tax lawyer who had served as an assistant district attorney listed 'soda jerk' as the first position under jog experience on his resume. Another applicant explained that he left his previous job because "my boss wanted to put a phone in the washroom for me to answer." A Vancouver man described himself as a short-sleeved accountant, obviously a typographical error for shirt-sleeved. One man went so far as to define his status as "married with three children and one ugly dog."

"There is one gimmick I would recommend using. Answer an employment ad with a telegram two or three days after it has appeared. The employer may have gotten 500 responses, but one telegram of 50 to 75 words should catch his eye. A well-timed telegram doesn't seem too corney because it has gotten there late. I might be comfortable using the telegram ploy if I were looking for a job."

Houses shelter you from nature as well as those government taxes

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

NEW YORK — One of the best tax shelters on which you'll ever lay eyes is your house. Home ownership is such a valued state that Congress has draped it in tax favors not granted any other investment.

Most of these breaks come into play when you sell the house. But to get the full profit that's coming to you, you have to keep track of the costs and expenses during all the years you live there. Fortunately, the record keeping needn't be elaborate, just the appropriate bills and documents tossed into a file or shoebox, to be resurrected when the time comes to sell. Here's your guide to the homeowner's tax shelter, according to the tax publisher, Prentice-Hall:

• Tax Defferal. If you sell your house at a profit, and put all the money toward buying a new house within 18 months. If you build, the new house must be started within 18 months and occupied within two years.

The tax on your profit isn't eliminated, it's just deferred, and continues to be deferred no matter how many moves you make. The full tax never falls due, unless you sell a house and don't buy a new one within the required period. At that point, you're taxed on the accumulated profit of all your past houses. If you ever buy a less expensive house than the one you sold, you're taxed on the portion of profit that's not reinvested in the new house.

If you own the house until your death, you never pay taxes on the profits. Whatever tax is due will be paid by your estate or your heirs when the house is sold.

Tax deferral applies only to your principal residence, be it a house, houseboat, or mobile home. If you sell a vacation home or investment property, the gain is taxed right away.

N.Y. insurance faces state suit

Illinois Insurance Director Richard L. Mathias has filed suit against the Insurance Superintendent of the State of New York to protect more than 2,500 Illinois policyholders and claimants. Illinois is represented in the suit by Atty. Gen. William J. Scott whose office has filed suit against the Empire Mutual Insurance Co. of New York for failure to honor more than $1 million in outstanding claims in Illinois. "Every policy in every state but New York has been canceled by Empire and the company is only paying claims presented by New York claimants. This is a drastic deviation from the insurance laws of both states," Mathias said.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York Thursday, states: "The first responsibility of the Illinois Dept. of Insurance is to protect the Illinois consumers, who in good faith have paid premiums to Empire Mutual as well as to those with outstanding claims against the company. The company now will not honor these claims." Most of the policies issued in Illinois are in the Chicago area," Mathias said.

Raw farm prices decline 2%

Prices of raw farm products fell 2 per cent more during the month ending Sept. 15, paced by soybeans, hogs, potatoes, corn and cotton, the Agriculture Dept. reported Friday. It was the fourth straight monthly decline in prices paid to farmers and brought the average prices for crops and livestock leaving the farm to 7 per cent below levels a year earlier. Prices for raw farm products now are at their lowest level since last November. The continuing drop in farm prices bolstered the administration's earlier projections of stable retail food prices through early 1978. Farm prices declined 3 per cent in August, 2 per cent in July and 5 per cent in June as forecasts for another year of bumper harvests were realized and market prices plunged.

Middle management pay up 8.4%

Middle management in U.S. corporations outpaced the projected inflation rate of 6.5 per cent with an 8.4 per cent increase in over all salaries in 1977, the Executive Compensation Service of American Management Assn. reported Friday. Middle management, the group just below the level of vice president with earnings in the $10,000 to $30,000-plus range, realized a real salary gain of 1.9 per cent this year after inflation is stripped out, the Amacon said. It was the third consecutive year that middle management salaries showed a gain of more than 8 per cent overall. Many middle managers are in the running for high-echelon executive jobs, Amacon said, "So top management must move quickly to match any pay raises offered by competitors if they wish to keep prospective top men within the organization." In the 1,003 organizations studied by Amacon in its 26th "middle management report," slightly more than 50 per cent of middle managers earned between $20,000 and $30,000 annually, 24 per cent had salaries in the over $30,000 category, and 20 per cent were in the $15,000 to $20,000 league.

New machine orders rising

Orders for new machinery rose 7.6 per cent in August, the McGraw-Hill Publications Co. said Friday in predicting a "boom" ahead for the industry. The company said the rise lifted its index to 299, seasonally adjusted, up 21 points from the revised figure for July. Compared with August 1976, the increase came to more than 11 per cent. MCGraw-Hill's economics department said the industry's capital appropriations in the second quarter totaled a near-record $15.2 billion, seasonally adjusted. "All signs point the way for a boom in the fourth quarter," it said.

Carter asks aid for jobless teens

President Carter has asked Congress for an extra $500 million to finance his plan to create jobs for unemployed teen-agers, Labor Sec. Ray Marshall said Friday. If approved by Congress, the funds would be added to the $1 billion already marked for the youth employment and demonstration projects act. The act provides for job training and public service jobs for unemployed youth between the ages of 16 and 23. Congress estimated the program would cost $1.5 billion when it authorized it in July. But it only appropriated $1 billion of the actual money, leaving the rest for a supplemental request from Carter. Carter made the new appropriation request after reviewing a report by Marshall on the "shockingly high levels" of minority youth unemployment.

How much life insurance is enough?

The answer differs for every person. Enough life insurance depends on how much monthly income your family would need if you weren't around to support them . and how much income you want at retirement if you live.

N.Y. insurance faces state suit

Illinois Insurance Director Richard L. Mathias has filed suit against the Insurance Superintendent of the State of New York to protect more than 2,500 Illinois policyholders and claimants. Illinois is represented in the suit by Atty. Gen. William J. Scott whose office has filed suit against the Empire Mutual Insurance Co. of New York for failure to honor more than $1 million in outstanding claims in Illinois. "Every policy in every state but New York has been canceled by Empire and the company is only paying claims presented by New York claimants. This is a drastic deviation from the insurance laws of both states," Mathias said.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York Thursday, states: "The first responsibility of the Illinois Dept. of Insurance is to protect the Illinois consumers, who in good faith have paid premiums to Empire Mutual as well as to those with outstanding claims against the company. The company now will not honor these claims." Most of the policies issued in Illinois are in the Chicago area," Mathias said.

Raw farm prices decline 2%

Prices of raw farm products fell 2 per cent more during the month ending Sept. 15, paced by soybeans, hogs, potatoes, corn and cotton, the Agriculture Dept. reported Friday. It was the fourth straight monthly decline in prices paid to farmers and brought the average prices for crops and livestock leaving the farm to 7 per cent below levels a year earlier. Prices for raw farm products now are at their lowest level since last November. The continuing drop in farm prices bolstered the administration's earlier projections of stable retail food prices through early 1978. Farm prices declined 3 per cent in August, 2 per cent in July and 5 per cent in June as forecasts for another year of bumper harvests were realized and market prices plunged.

Middle management pay up 8.4%

Middle management in U.S. corporations outpaced the projected inflation rate of 6.5 per cent with an 8.4 per cent increase in over all salaries in 1977, the Executive Compensation Service of American Management Assn. reported Friday. Middle management, the group just below the level of vice president with earnings in the $10,000 to $30,000-plus range, realized a real salary gain of 1.9 per cent this year after inflation is stripped out, the Amacon said. It was the third consecutive year that middle management salaries showed a gain of more than 8 per cent overall. Many middle managers are in the running for high-echelon executive jobs, Amacon said, "So top management must move quickly to match any pay raises offered by competitors if they wish to keep prospective top men within the organization." In the 1,003 organizations studied by Amacon in its 26th "middle management report," slightly more than 50 per cent of middle managers earned between $20,000 and $30,000 annually, 24 per cent had salaries in the over $30,000 category, and 20 per cent were in the $15,000 to $20,000 league.

New machine orders rising

Orders for new machinery rose 7.6 per cent in August, the McGraw-Hill Publications Co. said Friday in predicting a "boom" ahead for the industry. The company said the rise lifted its index to 299, seasonally adjusted, up 21 points from the revised figure for July. Compared with August 1976, the increase came to more than 11 per cent. MCGraw-Hill's economics department said the industry's capital appropriations in the second quarter totaled a near-record $15.2 billion, seasonally adjusted. "All signs point the way for a boom in the fourth quarter," it said.

Carter asks aid for jobless teens

President Carter has asked Congress for an extra $500 million to finance his plan to create jobs for unemployed teen-agers, Labor Sec. Ray Marshall said Friday. If approved by Congress, the funds would be added to the $1 billion already marked for the youth employment and demonstration projects act. The act provides for job training and public service jobs for unemployed youth between the ages of 16 and 23. Congress estimated the program would cost $1.5 billion when it authorized it in July. But it only appropriated $1 billion of the actual money, leaving the rest for a supplemental request from Carter. Carter made the new appropriation request after reviewing a report by Marshall on the "shockingly high levels" of minority youth unemployment.

How much life insurance is enough?

The answer differs for every person. Enough life insurance depends on how much monthly income your family would need if you weren't around to support them . and how much income you want at retirement if you live.

Let me help you determine how much is right you you.

Stop the hurt.
We can stop the pain of child abuse. Below are a few suggestions. Commit yourself to just one. And do your part to stop the hurt.

- ☐ I'll show my child some love. (Sometimes I forget.)
- ☐ I'll learn painless ways to tell my child "No."
- ☐ I'll volunteer time to my local child abuse prevention organization.
- ☐ I'd like to start helping right now. Here's my donation.

Stop the hurt.

We can stop the pain of child abuse. Below are a few suggestions. Commit yourself to just one. And do your part to stop the hurt.

- ☐ I'll show my child some love. (Sometimes I forget.)
- ☐ I'll learn painless ways to tell my child "No."
- ☐ I'll volunteer time to my local child abuse prevention organization.
- ☐ I'd like to start helping right now. Here's my donation.

Oswald: "Science is a great thing. Ask any scientist."

Jim: "It doesn't always work at the bridge table. Here is a hand from a team game where the helter-skelter bidder scored 690 points and the scientist wound up with minus 100."

Oswald: "No one can quarrel with either the one heart opening or the two-diamond response which started the action at both tables."

Jim: "There was a parting of the ways when the bidding got back to South. The unscientific South jumped to three no-trump. West opened the three of spades and it didn't take South any time at all to run off seven diamonds, four spades and the ace of hearts."

Oswald: "At the other table South explored with a bid of two spades. North rebid to three diamonds and South closed the auction at three notrump. Warned away from all other suits, West opened a club and East cashed five club tricks."

Jim: "This hand is a good example of luck in duplicate. Give North one more spade and one less club and the man who did not bid spades would have lost a slam."

Ask Andy

Electric eel gives shocks with organs

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Kim Mease, 11, of Canton, N.C., for her question:

HOW DOES AN EEL GIVE OFF ELECTRICITY?

Eels are long, thin fish that look very much like snakes. Most of them live in oceans but many varieties spend a great deal of their time in fresh water. They usually grow to be about three feet long, but some can be found as long as six feet. Both the European eel and the American swim from fresh-water streams to breeding grounds around the Bermuda Islands.

Electric eels belong to a family called Gymnotidae and they are not true eels. They actually are related to carp and catfish and only are called eels because they have snaky bodies. True fresh-water eels belong to a family called Anguillidae.

A strong electric shock can be given by an electric eel. He usually lives in the muddy, shallow waters of the Orinoco and Amazon rivers in South America.

An electric eel's head is quite flat and his eyes are far forward and very close to his mouth. Most of his organs are in the front fifth of his body with the rear four-fifths mainly holding the organs that make his electric current.

In the rear part of an electric eel's body are many layers of tissue, built one behind another very much like the plates in a storage battery. The current produced in these tissues flows from the head to the tail.

Scientists believe that a number of the swimming muscles in the electric eel's ancestors changed through the years into electric organs.

An electric eel has three pairs of electric organs. One pair, the longest, runs almost the full length of the body to the tip of the tail. Two shorter pairs are found under the long pair.

An electric shock is used to protect the fish from his enemies and also is used to catch food. The eel also can use the electricity to detect objects at a distance under water.

When an electric eel becomes excited, he can produce strong shocks in sets of three to five. Although each impulse lasts only a fraction of a second, an eel can keep them up for hours at a time. The electrical shock can reach between 200 or 300 volts, a jolt that certainly could stun a man if he came into contact with the fish.

Some eels have been known to discharge between 500 and 800 volts.

The electricity produced by an electric eel usually damages his own eyes, and then he uses a telegraph system to take the place of eyesight.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Terry Stroh, 13, of Spokane, Wash., for his question:

WHY DO WE HAVE SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS?

Most people in the United States have Social Security numbers because they are tied in to a protection plan that came into effect with the Social Security Act of 1935. The act provided for federally administered old-age insurance and also established unemployment insurance on a state-by-state basis.

In 1965 Congress added hospital and related health insurance benefits under the Social Security Act. A voluntary system of insurance to pay doctors also began with both systems called Medicare. At first they applied only to people 65 or older but not apply also to disabled persons who have received Social Security benefits for at least two years.

Old-age, survivor and disability insurance is administered by the federal government with the Social Security Administration directing the programs.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Bears look just like the old days—bad

COME BACK HERE. The Bears' Roger Stillwell finds that one way to halt New Orleans' Archie Manning is to grab his jersey. Unfortunately, the Bears let Manning slip away too often Sunday, and the quarterback ran and passed his Saints to an impressive 42-24 victory in Soldier Field.

Sunday was homecoming day for members of past Bears teams and the present-day Bears responded by turning back the clock.

But rather then return to the days of Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski and Sid Luckman, the Bears turned to the wrong page in the scrapbook — the era of Jim Cooley, Abe Gibron, Mike Hull and Tom Donchez.

And their opponents for the day, the New Orleans Saints, chipped in by pasting a 42-24 defeat into the Bears' book as Chicago's march back to National Football League respectability took two giant steps backward.

By game's end it was hard to tell what the Boo Birds in Soldier Field, the few that were left that is, were jeering about.

IT COULD HAVE been the Bears' defense, which took one look at quarterback Archie Manning, who scored three touchdowns and passed for another, and turned to silly putty.

Or it could have been the Bears' offense, which ruined quarterback Bob Avellini's finest pro performance with three offensive interference penalties, two of which nullified touchdowns.

Or it could have been 11 Bears penalties for 111 yards in the wrong direction.

Or seven dropped Chicago passes.

IN OTHER WORDS, it was a team effort.

"We broke down in every phase . . . penalties took us out . . . missed tackles . . . dropped passes," was coach Jack Pardee's summation as if someone needed reminding. "I don't know what we're going to do. We broke down in every phase of the game."

What started out as a Chicago romp turned into a New Orleans mugging, even though the Bears clobbered the Saints statistically, piling up 415 yards total offense compared to 314 by New Orleans. But the Saints won where it counted, ranking up six touchdowns to just three for Chicago. Two of the Bear scores came late, when things were pretty much decided anyway.

Walter Payton, who gained 140 yards in 19 carries, including a 49-yard run, caught four passes for 53 yards and scored all three Bears touchdowns, put his team ahead by snagging an Avellini pass at the 30-yard line and running in for a 33-yard touchdown early in the first quarter. From there, Manning took over against a befuddled Bear defense.

A QUARTERBACK draw gave the Saints their first touchdown, an eight-yard effort with :50 left in the first quarter. Manning capped a 72-yard drive by running a two-yard bootleg for a touchdown early in second quarter. By the time he scrambled around and hit running back Chuck Muncie for a 35-yard touchdown late in the half, the Saints were in control and the Bears were searching for excuses.

"Manning turned out to be the variable we didn't count on," said safety Gary Fencik, who again had to make up for a porous defensive line by taking part in 15 tackles, 11 of which were solos. "He (Manning) did things that quarterbacks with less guts wouldn't have done. And we had a total team collapse."

Pardee saw it somewhat simpler: "Manning would come down the middle, we'd miss the tackle and he'd score," he said.

The big play did help win it for the Saints, who won their first game Sunday in three tries. Manning's touchdown pass to Muncie came on a broken play. After Manning ran in an 11-yard score early in the third period, the Saints' Bob Pollard picked up an Avellini fumble midway through the fourth quarter and raced 52 yards for a touchdown that gave New Orleans a 35-17 lead. The final big play for the Saints came with just four minutes left when Jim Merlo picked off an Avellini pass and returned it 57 yards for a touchdown.

"IT'S DISCOURAGING," Avellini said. "I know they were out there giving 100 per cent but every time we had the ball it seemed like we made a critical mistake.

"I don't think New Orleans is a Super Bowl team, but we made them look like a Super Bowl team today."

Avellini completed 18 of 38 passes for 238 yards and one touchdown. An eight-yard touchdown toss to Roland Harper was nullified in second quarter by offensive interference, as was a six-yard scoring strike to Payton in the third quarter. Coupled with the seven dropped balls, Avellini was deprived of a great afternoon, much of which was spent trying to play catch up against five defensive backs.

"You maybe have one offensive interference called against you all season and we come up with three in one game," Pardee said.

Manning completed eight of 17 tosses for 168 yards and one touchdown.

THE BEARS' problems were elemental, like poor tackling that helped Saints' runnings gain an added five yards or break a pass play for big yardage.

Mighty Manning wins with nerve

by JEFF NORDLUND

A running quarterback is a rare commodity in the NFL.

First, few quarterbacks have the necessary speed. And second, even fewer have the nerve.

Place New Orleans' Archie Manning among those who have both the speed and the nerve — at least, up to a point.

'WHEN THE BALL gets near the end zone, then it's time to score no matter what," Manning said after rushing for three touchdowns in the Saints' 42-24 rout of the Bears at Soldier Field Sunday.

"So we ran the quarterback draw trap. It's a great play, a super play, but there are some pros and cons. For one thing, you can get the quarterback killed."

But Manning, who missed all of last season with an injured shoulder, survived unscathed. He wound up killing the Bears instead. He scored on runs of 8, 2 and 11 yards — drawing, bootlegging and scrambling the Bears out of the game.

"I RAN THE ball near the goal line, but it's not so easy out in midfield," Manning said. "Out there, those linebackers get a full head of steam when they come at you.

"Actually, the draw trap works better out there, since the secondary and linebackers are a little farther away from the line of scrimmage. Today, though, we ran it only near the goal."

Manning's success was a major embarrassment to the Bears. With the Bears leading 7-0 in the first period, Manning faded back from the Bears' 8-yard line before turning upfield to score.

In the second quarter, he made it 14-7 by rolling out from the Bears' 1-yard line to score his second touchdown. After passing for the Saints' third TD, a 35-yarder to Chuck Muncie, Manning ran another draw for 11 yards and another score in the third quarter.

THE RED-HAIRED Mississippi graduate who had rushed for only 34 yards in his first two games, ended the day with 41 yards and a 6.8 yards per carry average.

Pleased with his quarterback's success, New Orleans' coach Hank Stramm wasn't that surprised.

"We put the quarterback draw in for this game, because we knew the Bears' defense is aggressive," the second-year Saints' coach said. "Their linemen penetrate quickly, so we tried to set up the play so it would look like a pass.

"That backed up the linebackers, while our guards trapped their tackles. From there, it was just a matter of Archie picking his hole."

ALTHOUGH MANNING is the Saints' second all-time leading rusher, he said he is not ready to go for the ground the way his teammate Bobby Douglass did when he gained 968 yards in 1972 for the Bears.

"I'm not worried about getting hurt, but I'm not going to think run all the time now," Manning said. "I was pretty certain my shoulder was completely healed when we played the Bears this preseason. Now it's not bothering me at all.

"I was pleased with the way the shoulder felt passing today, too. I haven't thrown that much in the wind yet this season, but we actually dropped a few passes. Otherwise, we could've had some more points."

Earlier season injuries to wide receivers Tinker Ownes and Larry Burton thinned out the number of targets for Manning's passes. But James Thaxton, a converted tight end, and Richard Mauti, who had not caught a pass yet this season, filled in ably.

THAXTON CAUGHT three passes, and Mauti had two. Manning was 8 for 17 with 168 yards in all.

Manning's performance, his strongest of the season, prompted memories of his career at Mississippi where he still holds virtually all the school's passing records.

"Thi was the first time I've run for this many touchdowns since college," Manning admitted. "With the running attack working so well, it set up our passes. That's why we kept throwing even when we had a lead."

Sunday's game marked the return to form of Manning after his one-year absence — good news for Stramm and the Saints, but bad news for the rest of the league.

BO RATHER of the Bears gathers in a pass and is hit by New Orleans' Craig Cassady Sunday in Soldier Field. The officials ruled Cassady pushed Rather out, giving the Bears the ball at the New Orleans eight-yard-line. New Orleans romped, 42-24.

Fans say 'good-by' to Sox after 3-2 loss to Seattle

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

Na Na Na Na . . . Na Na Na Na . . . hey, hey, hey . . . goodby. Repeat. The familiar fight song of the White Sox began at 3:53 p.m. Sunday afternoon when Bill Nahorodny struck out to end the game and the 1977 baseball season.

The enthusiastic crowd of 20,953 fans braved the 57-degree weather to chant to their hearts content despite a 3-2 loss to Seattle.

"They're simply remarkable fans," White Sox owner Bill Veeck said. "They were just as energetic when we were in first place as they were at the end.

"The fans added 10 games to our won-loss record with such great support. Now, if I can go out and pick up a few key players over the winter, we'll give them more reason to follow us."

THE ALL-TIME Chicago White Sox home attendance record of 1,644,460, set in 1960, finally was broken Sunday. The 20,953 Fan Appreciation Day followers pushed the new existing mark to 1,657,135, the best support the Sox have received in their 77-year existence.

The early inning cheering, however,took place in the Seattle dugout as Mariner starter Glenn Abbott held the Sox hitless through the first four frames. Eric Soderholm's 25th home run of the season into the left field stands broke up the no-hit bid.

"I'm a very goal-oriented individual," Soderholm said. "And I have this continually burning desire inside me to reach them whenever possible.

"It's been one great year for myself and for the club and you really hate to see the season end. But, realistically, we did better than what some people thought we would do, which makes it that much better come spring training."

SEATTLE JUMPED on Sox starter Dave Frost in the second inning with three singles. Kevin Pasley's hit to left field scored ex-Sox player Bill Stein from second.

Two singles and a stolen base by Seattle in the fifth put the Mariners ahead 2-0.

"Sure, I gave up 10 hits out there but in the last month, I've pitched three good games which shouldn't go unnoticed," Frost said.

"I'm pleased with myself and if the same pitchers are around next year, I'll have to knock someone out of the rotation. Or maybe they'll trade someone.

"That's what it's all about . . . next year," Frost said. "Heck, if I would have caught (Dave) Collins grounder we still might have been playing."

COLLINS' grounder over Frost's head in the seventh became the eventual game winning run. He scored one out later on Danny Meyer's bloop double to left.

Seattle's Rupert Jones calmed the crowd's "goodby" chant to a low roar when he made a diving catch of Royle Stillman's vicious drive to right center. The leading rookie-of-the-year candidate prevented Nahorodny from scoring and secured Abbott's 12th win of the season.

Archery tourney reset

The Mid-Suburban League girls archery championship, postponed Saturday because of rain, will be at noon today at Fremd High School.

Undefeated in dual meets, Rolling Meadows carries the favorite's role into the competition. Rolling Meadows defeated Prospect 9-2 in the key league meet.

Hersey High School's Michelle Frank is the favorite for individual honors. Beaten just once in eight conference meets, Frank has scored as high as 673 with a 661 average.

Jenny Krock of Arlington heads the list of other candidates with a chance of toppling Frank. Krock is the only archer to beat Frank in the Mid-Suburban League and she has a top score of 658.

Prospect's Karen Kurka and Carol Hoeckelberg also are among the top scorers in the league. Kurka has hit 636 in 1977, and Hoeckelberg has a 639.

Pirates make Cubs walk final plank

PITTSBURGH — Three great rivers converge in this city, three of them — the Ohio, the Monongahela and the Allegheny. They all wash up practically to the gates of Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium.

The only question after the Cubs dropped a pair of season-ending decisions to the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday was which river would Herman Franks choose to throw himself into?

The Cub manager watched as his team, once out in front in the NL East by as many as 8½ games, lost 5-1 and 3-2, to finish the 1977 season with a disappointing 81-81 record. The agony of defeat wasn't tempered exactly by the ignominy of it all.

THE CUBS HAD an outside shot at closing in a tie with St. Louis for third place, but they had to win both games to do it and St. Louis had to lose. By the time Pirate rookie Tim Jones beat them with seven innings of shutout ball in the opener, the Cubs were ready to face the music in fourth place. Out of the money.

The Cubs were destined to finish out the year in the same manner they opened it — with a loss. Jones scattered four hits in his first major league start before tiring. The Cubs couldn't touch him.

Bobby Murcer hit his 27th homer of the year, giving him 89 RBIs, to break up the shutout in the ninth inning against reliever Grant Jackson.

The hitting star for the Pirates was another nameless rookie, Mike Easler, who slammed his first major league homer off Cub starter Ray Burris (14-16) in the opener. Easler chipped in with two singles and three RBIs.

WHEN THE CUBS fell, 3-2, in the nightcap, on Ed Ott's game-winning single in the ninth that scored Easler, the Cubs' record finally fell to the .500 mark. At no time since April had they been at or under .500. As late as June 28, the Cubs were 25 games over the break-even mark.

Bill Bonham started the second game for the Cubs, but Dennis Lamp relieved him in time to surrender Easler's leadoff double in the ninth preceding Ott's RBI clincher.

The Cubs had taken a 2-1 lead in the seventh on RBI singles by Greg Gross and Steve Swisher, but Ken Macha tied it in the bottom of the inning when he drove in a run with his second single of the game.

THE PIRATES, who finished second behind Philadelphia and 10 games ahead of the Cubs, played 96-66 baseball for first-year manager Chuck Tanner.

The Cubs, meanwhile, finished the season by losing 59 of their last 93 ball games, which figures out to a .366 percentage.

Carew bags title with .388 mark as Twins win

from Daily Herald wire services

Rod Carew rapped out three singles in four trips to capture the American League batting title with a .388 mark in Milwaukee Sunday, matching the highest average in the major league since Ted Williams' .388 in 1957 and leading the Minnesota Twins to a 6-2 season-ending victory over Milwaukee.

Carew, who also matched Williams by winning his sixth batting title, finished with 239 hits, more than any other hitter since Bill Terry's 254 in 1930. Carew's .388 average is the highest in the major leagues since Williams 1957 mark and represents the best percentage since Williams' .406 in 1941. Carew also singled in a run in the eighth for his 100th RBI, a personal season record.

Dave Goltz finished with a seven-hitter in posting a 20-11 season.

ROOKIE DELL Alston executed a successful squeeze bunt to score Chris Chambliss from third base in the eighth inning with the decisive run and lift the New York Yankees to an 8-7 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Before Alston's sacrifice, Elrod Hendricks singled home two runs to tie the score at 7-all after the Yankees loaded the bases on a double by Graig Nettles and a pair of walks.

George Brett's solo home run in the first inning was all Dennis Leonard needed to become a 20-game winner for the first time in his career with a 2-0 regular-season ending victory for the Kansas City Royals over the California Angels.

LEONARD, 20-12, scattered six singles and struck out nine in posting his fifth shutout. It was the 26-year-old right-hander's 22nd complete game this season and 16th victory in his last 20 decisions.

Kurt Bevacqua's two-run double was the big blow of a five-run third inning which carried the Texas Rangers to an 8-7 victory over the Oakland A's.

The Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles finished the season tied for second place in the American League East after the finale at Fenway Park was rained out.

BOTH BOSTON and Baltimore finished with 97-64 records, a .602 percentage. The clubs will not replay the game but instead will split second and third-place money, which comes to about $1,500 per man.

IN THE NATIONAL League, Jay Johnstone drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a home run when the National League East champion Philadelphia Phillies defeated Montreal 5-3 for their 101st victory of the season.

Larry Christenson stopped the Expos with three hits through seven innings to pick up his 19th win against six defeats. Gene Garber finished up to notch his 19th save.

Major league baseball

New York shelled St. Louis 20-game winner Bob Forsch for four runs in the first inning but the Mets needed Joel Youngblood's RBI triple for a 6-4 triumph over the Cardinals in the season finale for both teams.

ROOKIE LEFTHANDER Bob Shirley pitched a five-hitter for his first major-league complete game and the San Diego Padres bunched four hits for all thier runs in the second inning to defeat the San Francisco Giants 3-1.

James Rodney Richard struck out 14 in pitching his 18th victory and Dennis Walling's bases-loaded triple with two out in the seventh inning broke a 3-3 tie that enabled the Houston Astros to defeat the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-3.

They had used homers by Manny Mota, Dusty Baker and Glenn Burke to take a 3-2 lead in the bottom of the sixth. Baker's 30th homer helped Los Angeles become the first team in major league history to have four players with 30 or more homers.

The Atlanta Braves capitalized on four Cincinnati Red errors to gain a 6-3 victory behind the five-hit pitching of Mickey Mahler and Dave Campbell in the season's finale for both teams.

MIGHTY MANNING. New Orleans' Archie Manning, who frustrated the Bears' defense all afternoon Sunday, puts a move on linebacker Don Rives for a short pickup. Coming from behind is the Bears' Jim Osborne (68). Manning scored three touchdowns and passed for one in a 42-24 victory over the Bears.

Kilmer fires Redskins past Cards, 24-14

Veteran Redskin quarterback Billy Kilmer, much maligned recently for his wobbly passes and conservative play calls, fired three touchdown passes Sunday to give Washington a surprising 24-14 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The 38-year-old Kilmer completed 12-of-21 passes for 206 yards, including scoring strikes of 12 yards to Frank Grant, 27 yards to Jean Fugett and 53 yards to John Riggins. Mark Moseley kicked all three conversions, plus a 41-yard field goal.

St. Louis, hampered the whole game by poor field position, got its only points in the fourth period on a 7-yard pass from Jim Hart to J. V. Cain that cut the Redskin lead to 14-7 and a 1-yard plunge by Wayne Morris with just 28 seconds remaining in the game.

HART ALSO moved the Cardinals into Redskins' territory twice more in the fourth period but was thwarted by interceptions by cornerback Joe Lavender and defensive end Ron McDole.

The Redskins are now 2-1 while the Cardinals are 1-2 in the competitive NFC East.

In other games, San Diego shocked Cincinnati 24-3, Detroit topped Philadelphia 17-13, Pittsburgh beat Cleveand 28-14, Atlanta downed the New York Giants 17-3, Baltimore overcame Buffalo 17-14, Dallas beat Tampa Bay 23-7, Minnesota stopped Green Bay 19-7, Los Angeles upended San Francisco 34-14, Miami downed Houston 27-7, Denver beat Seattle 24-13 and the New York Jets stunned New England 30-27.

James Harris fired a pair of first-half TD strikes to wide receiver Charlie Joiner, then plunged one yard for another score in the third quarter to carry the Chargers over the Bengals. Harris completed 14-of-20 passes for 200 yards before leaving the game with a jammed thumb early in the final period.

GREG LANDRY passed three yards to running back Dexter Bussey for a TD with 2:47 left in the third quarter to rally the Lions from a 13-10 deficit. Bussey earlier scored on a 14-yard run but the Eagles rallied behind Ron Jaworski, who completed 13-of-24 passes for 207 yards and two TDs.

Detroit hurt itself with penalties but the drive which raised the Lions record to 2-1 and dropped the Eagles to 1-2 was relatively mistake free. The Lions had eight penalties for a total of 62 yards.

Landry marched the Lions 68 yards in 12 plays in answer to a Philadelphia drive of 54 yards which ended with Jaworski hitting 6-foot-8 wide receiver Harold Carmichael with a 16-yard scoring pass. Doug English blocked the extra point, however.

Terry Bradshaw drilled three TD passes — two to Lynn Swann — and plunged for a fourth score to spark the Steelers over the Browns. Bradshaw completed 10-of-17 passes for 143 yards as Pittsburgh tied Cleveland at 2-1 in the AFC Central. Besides Swann's TD catches of five and 14 yards, Bradshaw also completed a 65-yard TD pass to Frank Lewis.

SCOTT HUNTER set up Monroe Ealey's 1-yard plunge early in the second period with an 18-yard bootleg play and backup Falcon QB Kim McQuilken threw an 8-yard scoring pass to Alfred Jenkins late in the final period. The Giants could only manage Joe Danelo's 47-yard fourth-quarter field goal.

Bert Jones, who completed 20-of-30 passes for 175 yards, fired a 15-yard scoring pass to Don McCauley in the third quarter to give the Colts a 17-7 advantage. Ron Lee's 9-yard TD run and Toni Linhart's 45-yard field goal accounted for Baltimore's other scoring. Bills' QB Joe Ferguson was 19-of-38 for 234 yards but O. J. Simpson was held to just 52 yards in 16 carries.

A 79-yard interception return for a TD by Thomas Henderson robbed Tampa Bay of early momentum and sent the Buccaneers to their 17th loss in as many games. The Cowboys capped a 17-point first period on Robert Newhouse's 17-yard scoring run. Efren Herrera added three field goals.

Fran Tarkenton passed for his 311th career TD, a 16-yard toss to Sammy White in the first quarter, and Chuck Foreman and Sammy Johnson plunged for two more scores to give Viking Coach Bud Grant his 100th NFL career victory at the Packers' expense.

LYNN DICKEY passed to Steve Odom for 95 yards and a Green Bay touchdown on the third play of the game but the Vikings stopped the Packers after that.

The Viking dominated play except in the scoreless third quarter, piling up 24 first downs to Green Bay's eight and outgaining the Packers 325 yards to 208.

The Rams converted two interceptions of Jim Plunkett passes and a blocked Tom Wittum punt for a 17-point final quarter to break open a close game and rout the 49ers. It was Los Angeles' second straight victory under 13-year veteran QB Joe Namath after a season-opening defeat, bu the Rams lost leading receiver Ron Jesse for the season with torn ligaments in his right knee.

Duriel Harris caught five Bob Griese passes for 87 yards and a score to give Miami to a 21-0 first-quarter lead and a stubborn Dolphins' defense shackeled the Oilers. Miami's other TDs came on a 1-yard buck by Norm Bulaich, a 3-yard burst over the middle by Benny Malone and a 2-yard scamper with 21 seconds left by Leroy Harris.

CRAIG MORTON passed for one TD and ran for another to lead the Broncos over the Seahawks. Morton riddled Seattle with his passing arm and befuddled them with two bootleg plays, which led to his score.

Pat Leahy, who earlier missed a key extra point attempt and had a field goal blocked, kicked a 32-yard field goal with 23 seconds remaining to lift the Jest tnd new coach Walt Michaels to their first victory, an upset of the Patriots.

Leahy's winning field goal came six plays after linebacker Al Palewicz recovered Mike Haynes' fumble of a punt at the Patriots' 29. Rookie Bruce Harper ran 15 yards for a first down and Leahy kicked the clutch field goal after a delay of game penalty.

Leahy's kick spoiled a comeback return by the Patriots, 14-point favorites, who fell to 1-2, the same as the Jets.

GREG BUTTLE'S 44-yard interception return lifted New York into a 21-20 lead and Richard Todd made it 27-20 with his second TD pass of the game.

TRYING TO STEP out of the grasp of the Bears' Allan Ellis is New Orleans' running back Churck Muncie, one of many Saints' heroes Sunday in a 42-24 smashing of Chicago.

Area cross country teams return home trophy-laden

Schaumburg, Hersey and Prospect came home with first-place cross country trophies Saturday while Fremd came home with its pride intact.

There was no first-place hardware for the Fremd Vikings, the perennial Mid-Suburban League champions of running, but coach Roy Hascup's harriers didn't exactly shy away from the challenge of the best that Illinois and Indiana has to offer.

Fremd was third with 137 points at the Illiana Invitational hosted by Thornridge. In first place was Deerfield, everybody's choice for No. 1 in the nation, with 40 points. Carmel High School of Indiana was second with 118. Carmel is ranked No. 1 in the Hoosier State.

"WE MET AT LEAST one of our sub-goals," said Hascup. "We wanted to split up Deerfield's pack and we did."

Fremd's Tom Ross was fourth overall, running the 2.95-mile rain-soaked course in 14:53. Deerfield's Todd McCallister (14:47) and Keith Hampton (14:49) ran 1-2, followed by John Sullivan of Thornridge (14:52) and Ross.

Deerfield's next finishers were eighth, 14th and 15th. After Ross, Fremd's next men were Matt Filosa (20th), Mike Warren (21st), Ed Martinez (34th) and Bob Ratcliffe (58th). Senior Dan Inbody was held out of the race because of illness.

"I want them healthy for the Palatine meet and for conference," said Hascup. "And next week we see what Mr. Joe Newton has over at York."

FREMD JOURNEYS to the Peoria Invite next Saturday to defend its meet title against York, one of the state's powerhouses.

'We were a little late coming up on Deerfield this time," said Hascup, whose Vikings are rated No. 2 in Illinois. "We don't let it happen again."

While Fremd was deprived of a first-place trophy, Schaumburg won a second straight title at Niles West, Hersey won the over-all title at the Grant-Crystal Lake Invite and Prospect successfully defended its title at the Flora Invitational.

Schaumburg got an individual third from junior Tom Placek and a sixth from Keith Mazikowski to help the Saxons to 68 first-place points. Jack Breen (15th), Ed Joyner (19th) and Mike Danese (25th) rounded out their top five.

THE INDIVIDUAL champion was Wheeling's Ben Sanchez, who raced the three-mile course in 15:31. Sanchez' teammate Kevin Lucas was runner-up as Wheeling finished second in the team standings with 77 points.

Schaumburg was third on the sophomore level but Saxon freshman Glenn Goergen continued his individual onslaught by taking another soph title.

Hersey won the freshman and junior races and took second on the soph level to edge second-place Woodstock and third-place Palatine at Crystal Lake. The Huskies captured three individual titles as well, with Steve Johnson winning the junior race, John Irwin the soph and Steve Kane the frosh. Hersey's Glen Russell won the open race, also.

Palatine won the senior race as Tom Johnson (15:52) and Chuck Elliott ran 1-2.

PROSPECT'S VICTORY at downstate Flora was achieved with 39 points as Ken Wetendorf (3rd), Mark Smith (7th), Ken Dell (8th) and Scott Satko (9th) placed in the top 10. Fifthman Dave Hayes was 12th and Ron Leino was 13th.

Olney, led by individual winner Perry Sager, took second in the meet with 104 points.

Hoffman Estates finished second behind Oswego at the Lockport Invite.

Harper won its first cross country title in three years at the Oakton Raider Invite, led by Maine West grad Jeff Brydges' winning effort in 21:30. Teammates Tim Jorgenson (7th), Tim Blechl (8th), Curt Long (13th) and Mike Fischer (26th) rounded out the Hawk scoring for 55 points. In second place was downstate power Danville, a team that had beaten Harper two weeks ago. Danville had 67.

Carew bags title with .388 mark as Twins win

from Daily Herald wire services

Rod Carew rapped out three singles in four trips to capture the American League batting title with a .388 mark in Milwaukee Sunday, matching the highest average in the major league since Ted Williams' .388 in 1957 and leading the Minnesota Twins to a 6-2 season-ending victory over Milwaukee.

Carew, who also matched Williams by winning his sixth batting title, finished with 239 hits, more than any other hitter since Bill Terry's 254 in 1930. Carew's .388 average is the highest in the major leagues since Williams 1957 mark and represents the best percentage since Williams' .406 in 1941. Carew also singled in a run in the eighth for his 100th RBI, a personal season record.

Dave Goltz finished with a seven-hitter in posting a 20-11 season.

ROOKIE DELL Alston executed a successful squeeze bunt to score Chris Chambliss from third base in the eighth inning with the decisive run and lift the New York Yankees to an 8-7 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Before Alston's sacrifice, Elrod Hendricks singled home two runs to tie the score at 7-all after the Yankees loaded the bases on a double by Graig Nettles and a pair of walks.

George Brett's solo home run in the first inning was all Dennis Leonard needed to become a 20-game winner for the first time in his career with a 2-0 regular-season ending victory for the Kansas City Royals over the California Angels.

LEONARD, 20-12, scattered six singles and struck out nine in posting his fifth shutout. It was the 26-year-old right-hander's 22nd complete game this season and 16th victory in his last 20 decisions.

Kurt Bevacqua's two-run double was the big blow of a five-run third inning which carried the Texas Rangers to an 8-7 victory over the Oakland A's.

The Boston Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles finished the season tied for second place in the American League East after the finale at Fenway Park was rained out.

BOTH BOSTON and Baltimore finished with 97-64 records, a .602 percentage. The clubs will not replay the game but instead will split second and third-place money, which comes to about $1,500 per man.

IN THE NATIONAL League, Jay Johnstone drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a home run when the National League East champion Philadelphia Phillies defeated Montreal 5-3 for their 101st victory of the season.

Larry Christenson stopped the Expos with three hits through seven innings to pick up his 19th win against six defeats. Gene Garber finished up to notch his 19th save.

Olney, led by individual winner Perry Sager, took second in the meet with 104 points.

Hoffman Estates finished second behind Oswego at the Lockport Invite.

Harper won its first cross country title in three years at the Oakton Raider Invite, led by Maine West grad Jeff Brydges' winning effort in 21:30. Teammates Tim Jorgenson (7th), Tim Blechl (8th), Curt Long (13th) and Mike Fischer (26th) rounded out the Hawk scoring for 55 points. In second place was downstate power Danville, a team that had beaten Harper two weeks ago. Danville had 67.

Fremd tramples Buffalo Grove in 21-6 mud bowl

by KEITH REINHARD

Brian Cromi galloped for 57 yards and a touchdown of the first play of the second quarter, launching Fremd High School on its soggy way toward a fourth straight win at Buffalo Grove's mud bowl Saturday, 21-6.

The elements have not been good to the Bison football field this fall but the Vikings apparently could have cared less. They were able to make the most of a strong northerly wind while pulling off the big plays on the sloppy turf.

Buffalo Grove's lone score came during the last eight seconds of play when the final verdict had long since been decided.

"THEY'RE AN excellent ball club, no doubt about it," said Bison coach Grant Blaney. He might have taken some consolation in the fact that his charges were able to contain premier area rusher Kevin Weaver, but there was little doubt after the first half that the Vikes are more than a one-man team.

"Cromie's an underrated player," acknowledged Fremd skipper Joe Samojedny. "He's not flashy but very capable and having him in the backfield takes some of the pressure off Weaver."

Even without Cromie or Weaver the Vikings would have posed problems Saturday. Samojedny mixed in just enough of a passing attack to keep the enemy off balance while taking excellent advantage of the wind.

"KICKING WAS probably the most important factor in the game," the Fremd coach explained after letting the Bison receive with the wind in their faces to open both halves. "We were getting off the good punts and they weren't and the result was field position that favored us most of the game."

After taking a 7-0 lead into the dressing room at midgame, the visitors were quick to regain possession of the ball in the second half — in Bison territory. Mike Gavigan quickly connected on a 23-yard pass to Weaver and two plays later zeroed in on John Cane for a 16-yard TD fling.

Later in the third quarter Buffalo Grove was presented with one of their better scoring opportunities when punter Paul Passaglia was nailed in the backfield just as he launched a complete pass that would have bailed Fremd out of a hole.

THE PASS WAS ruled void by Passaglia, who last week converted a muffed punt play into an 85-yard scoring jaunt against Wheeling, is not the type to be outdone. Three plays later the Bison were forced to punt, the kick was blocked and Passaglia scooped up the loose ball and scrambled 25 yards for a touchdown.

Buffalo Grove avoided the shutout when Craig Groot entered the game in the waning moments and connected on four of six passes. The biggest was a 41 yarder down to Dave Furmanski at the 12 and the last was a three yarder that Bob Eischen snared in the end zone.

Samojedny had praise for everyone as his club went up 2-0 in the division while dealing the Bison their third straight setback, but the Vike helmsmen had special praise for his offensive line.

"It was just too muddy out there to go any other way than blocking one-on-one and the guys up front really came through. It was Marty Finish who sprang Cromi loose on his big run and others — (Duane) Amell, (Chris) Mein, (Tony) Perez, (Dave) McKinney, (Greg Simetz and (Doug Ahrens were all tough in there today."

WALLING IN WEAVER. Leading area rusher Kevin Weaver of Fremd is stopped for a small gain by a Buffalo Grove defender during Saturday's contest at the Bison field. The hosts managed to contain Weaver, but not the vikes who stormed to their second straight MSL North Division triumph, 21-6.

Harper blanks Thornton 16-0 on running strength

by DAVE HESS

The wind blew icy chills from the north and a drizzle fell throughout the game, but the Harper Hawks warmed their home faithful with a 16-0 victory over Thonrton Saturday.

Harper's Mark Bertolani, out since the first game with an injured ankle, returned to the lineup and bolstered the Hawk offense with 129 yards rushing through the mud and slippery turf. Combined with Ricky Williams, who racked up 82 yards on the ground Harper displayed a ball-control offense that got 233 total yards rushing.

Thonrton won the toss and elected to receive and Harper opted for the wind at their backs. Pete Passagilia boomed the kickoff out of the end zone to give Thonrnton an idea of things to come.

THE BULLDOGS could go nowhere against Harper's defense, and on fourth down from the 26, Thornton's Ed Prskalo, under a heavy rush, shanked a punt off the side of his foot to the 29 yard line.

The Hawks drove to the 15, but a missed handoff resulted in quarterback Jim Atkinson being sacked for an 11-yard loss. An illegal procedure penalty moved Harper back 5 more yards and a Hawk field goal try failed when the ball slipped out of the holder's grasp.

Thornton's drive stalled when they moved into Harper territory. On fourth and 2 from the 42, Andy Lucas tried the line but was stopped by Jim Collins playing defensive end for the first time and corner back Tony Maldanado. Hawks took over on their own 41.

Alternating running backs, Williams and Bertolani, Harper moved into Thornton territory at the 36. Atkinson then surprised the Bulldogs and hit Bill Strawn with a 13-yard pass in the flat and the Hawks were moving.

BERTOLANI carried three more times to the 2 yard line and Atkinson sneaked over for a 6-0 lead. Passaglia kicked the extra point. In view of the conditions Harper's lead looked very commanding.

"We knew they would be weak in their passing," said Harper coach John Eliasik. "Even more so with the weather conditions. We knew their kicking game was weak too, so when they won the toss in the second half we took the wind. Our kicking is one of our strong points."

Thornton did not get past their own 32 for the whole third quarter and on the first set of downs the Bulldogs punted only 27 yards into the wind.

Harper took over on Thornton's 44 and with a drizzle falling, Atkinson passed on their first play, hitting Strawn for 21 yards. Three plays later, Bertolani broke two tackles and raced in from the 11. The touchdown attempt was wide and the Hawks led 13-0.

PASSAGLIA boomed another kickoff into the end zone and Thornton could do nothing against Harper's defense.

"We had two people playing key positions on defense for the first time today," said Eliasik. "John Lipp and Jim Collins played the defensive end besides playing at guard and tackle on offense."

Harper's final score was set up as the third quarter and the wind advantage was ending. Bertolani bolted up the middle for 22 yards on first and 10 and carried to the Bulldog 23. Atkinson and Williams combined on four running plays for one first down, but after a pass in the end zone fell incomplete, Passaglia kicked a 19-yard fieldgoal for a 16-0 lead.

The play of the day for Harper did not result in a score but with a third and 17 from their own 48, Bertolani took off on a sweep around the left side. Following a key block by Terry Freeman Bertolani picked his way through the worst part of the muddy field and rambled 42 yards to the 10.

Rival Hoffman Estates beaten

Soggy Schaumburg snatches first win

by ART MUGALIAN

Schaumburg's football team grew up Saturday while the Hoffman Estates gridders just grew muddier.

The rival neighbors met in the rain and slop of the Hoffman field, each entering with winless records. When it was over the laundry job had gone to the lowest bidder, Schaumburg had a 7-0 victory. With it went the Twinbrook Trophy, emblematic of supremacy in this young but already ferocious rivalry.

THE WINNING Saxons, now 1-3 and headed for a big meeting with Elk Grove next week, took advantage of one Hawk letdown late in the first half to go into the end zone. Hoffman was asleep at the switch when running back Tim McGraw took a handoff from Scott Wright and raced to his left, darted down the sideline and reached the goal untouched for the only score of the day.

"We'll take 'em any way we can get 'em," Schaumburg coach Bob Ferguson observed. "Any way we can get 'em."

Ferguson's Saxons came into the action averaging just five points a game in the first three weeks of the season, so they obviously didn't imoping steadily.

"McGraw made some nice moves out there and we got some good blocking on the outside perimeters," said Ferguson.

McGRAW, A 6-0, 165-pound senior, has grown into the job of ball carrier to the point where he has increased his yardage and his workload each week. Against Hoffman, McGraw piled up 115 yards on 16 attempts. He now has a four-game total of 279 yards for a 5.1-per-carry average.

The TD run by McGraw, coming at 2:08 of the second quarter, woke up the partisans on both sides of the field just when they were settling into a long afternoon of mudball between the 40-yard-lines.

Earlier, the Hawks made an earnest attempt at their first points of the 1977 season, marching down to the Schaumburg 3-yard-line only to be repulsed by George Tuzil, Steve Ramsey and the rest of the junior-dominated Saxon defense.

"Our defense did an excellent job," Ferguson said. "The big turning point was the goal line stand."

HOFFMAN HAD taken a short Saxon punt from the enemy 39 to the very limits of the pearly gates. Doing most of the running was junior Gary Hudson, who picked up a pair of first downs on the drive, including a 12-yard sweep that was stopped just 3 yards short of the end zone by McGraw.

Hudson got nowhere on first down and fullback Dave Kilcrece ran into a stone wall of Schaumburg defenders when he tried to go over the middle on second down. Then the 6-3, 200-pound Ramsey dragged Hudson to the ground when the Hawks tried the sweep again. On fourth down, Hudson ran into junior Mark Thorson and the ball went over to Schaumburg.

Three plays later, however, Hawk junior Phil Moreno recovered a Saxon fumble on the 4 and Hoffman had the opportunity staring them in the face again. But on the first play from the 4, the Hawks coughed up the ball and Schaumburg's Tom Kukulski pounced on it.

This time when the Saxons couldn't move, Tuzil boomed a 57-yard wind-aided punt that pushed the Hoffman offense out of striking distance.

"WE WANTED TO stay inside with the option game," said Ferguson, who blamed the terrible field conditions for his conservative, no-pass game plan. Junior quarterback Wright not only didn't throw the ball; he rarely pitched it either.

The lone TD came on a left sweep after soph fullback Tim Clausen had picked up a first down and Wright scrambled to midfield on a keeper. McGraw then broke a tackle and went all the way, aided by a crunching downfield block from Tuzil, the 6-4, 210-pound two-way lineman who was playing injured.

Woodstock's scoring blitz stops Stevenson, 32-12

A second half scoring blitz gave the Woodstock Blue Streaks a 32-12 nonconference football victory over the host Stevenson Patriots Saturday.

Until the third period, the game was close, with both teams tied at 6-6, until the third period.

Woodstock scored first when it took the opening kickoff and drove 78 yards in 11 plays. Dave Mohapp tallied the first of his three touchdowns on a 6-yard run.

FOLLOWING AN exchange of punts, the Patriots came back on Todd Schmitke's 48-yard run. Like Woodstock, Stevenson missed the extra point kick attampt.

After a scoreless second period, the roof caved in on Stevenson during a disastrous second half. The Blue Streaks notched two touchdowns each in the third and fourth periods while the Patriots got a fourth period tally.

In the third period, Stevenson was forced to punt into the wind and Woodstock returned the kick to the Stevenson 49-yard line. Three plays later, Mohapp produced touchdown No. 2, on a 38-yard run. John Vosburgh's extra point kick was good and Woodstock led, 13-6.

After the kickoff, Stevenson fumbled the ball away on its 43 and Woodstock recovered. However, the Patriots held, forcing a Woodstock punt.

Disaster struck as Stevenson fumbled the Woodstock punt and Woodstock recovered on the Stevenson 21.

THREE PLAYS LATER, Mohap and Vosburgh victimized the Patriots again. Mohapp scored on a 12-yard run while Vosburgh kicked the extra point. Woodstock's advantage grew to 20-6.

Vosburgh continued rattling the Patriots in the fourth period. A 1-yard touchdown run by Vosburgh concluded a 71-yard, nine-play drive.

Midway through the same period, the Schmitke brothers helped earn Stevenson its final score. Todd Schmitke's caught 31-yard pass from quarterback Ken Kriske set up Mark Schmitke's eight-yard touchdown run two plays later.

DIRTY DEAL. Buffalo Grove quarterback Eric Gaddis (17) finds himself victimized by Fremd's Dave Yelovich (90) and a pair of mud-soaked Viking teammates during Saturday's MSL North Division contest on the sloppy Bison turf. The Vikes went on to notch their fourth straight win, 21-6.

DKIPLOMATIC DUO. A pair of world travelers, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Cosmos soccer star Pele greet each other before game concluding Pele's playing career. Nearly 76,000 people witnessed the farewell event.

Pele bid farewell

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Pele, the king of soccer, put away his crown Saturday.

He played his last game and scored his last goal and then he said, "I died a little bit."

But the 75,646 fans who filled a rain-soaked Meadowlands stadium came not to bury Pele but to praise him.

They did so with a fervor the stadium has never seen — a three-minute standing ovation before the game, a deafening roar of delight when he scored his 1,281st goal, prolonged applause at halftime ceremonies, and a rapturous long hurrah as the 36-year-old Brazilian superstar was borne bare-chested from the field on the shoulders of his teammates to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

It was a fitting farewell for a king.

The match, taking place mostly in blinding rain, brought together the only two clubs for who Pele has played in his 22-year career — the Cosmos and Santos of Brazil.

For the record, the Cosmos won 2-1, with goals from Ramon Mifflin and Pele — the latter's one of the best of his career — while Reynaldo scored for Santos.

But this was one occasion when the game was not the thing. The man was.

Doing him honor were Muhammad Ali, Henry Kissinger, five winning World Cup captains including Bobby Moore of England and West Germany's Franz Beckenbauer, film star Robert Redford, 761 media representatives from 25 countries and President Carter's son Jeff, who gave Pele a trophy in tribute to his sporting efforts for the United States.

Barber rally earns Silverado title

NAPA, Calif. — Miller Barber, one of the most consistent money winners on the PGA Tour but without a victory since 1974, shot a 7-under-par 65 Sunday to overtake front-runner George Archer and win the $200,000 Classic at Silverado by two strokes.

The 46-year-old Barber, who said he never doubted he'd win again even though his last victory came three years ago in the Ohio King's Island Open, started the final round on a perfect golfing day six shots behind Archer, who tied the Worth Course record at Silverado on Saturday with a 63.

But Archer ran into driving problems in the final round and wound up with a 1-over 73 while Barber made three birdies in the last four holes to overhaul him and win $40,000.

Archer won $22,800 and said he was lucky to save second place from young Howard Twitty, who set a course record 62 and finished a shot behind Archer and three behind Barber.

John Schroeder closed with a 66 to finish in fourth place at 277 and win $9,400 while Mac McLendon and Grier Jones wound up at 278 and won $7,700 each.

Tom Watson, winner of six events this year including the Masters and British Open, finished in a tie at 280 and won $5,225, which boosted his 1977 earnings to more than $310,000.

Hunt wins race; Lauda claims title

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — James Hunt of Britain, driving a McLaren and with a pinched nerve in his left arm, beat American Mario Andretti's Lotus by three seconds Sunday in the United States Grand Prix auto race that saw Niki Lauda of Austria clinch his second Formula One title in three years with a fourth-place finish.

Hunt, who injured his arm last year while winning the Grand Prix title and is still plagued by pain and stiffness, took the lead in the 15th lap when Hans Stuck of Germany pulled his Brabham to the side of the Watkins Glen road racing course with mechanical problems.

It was Hunt's second straight U.S. Grand Prix victory, a feat performed only once previously, by the late Jim Clark of Britain in 1966-67.

Lauda and his red Ferrari entered the race with 69 points and needed only one more for the championship clincher. A sixth-place finish would have given him the title, but the gutsy Austrian, a near fatality in a flaming crash last year in Germany, moved into fourth place on the 15th lap and refused to budge from that position as he played it safe.

Brownlee tops Dallas Open field

DALLAS — Vivian Brownlee, who had never won anything more than a club championship, outfought three veteran players to win the $50,000 Dallas Civitan Open by a shot Sunday.

Brownlee, 30, fired a 1-over-par 73 in gusting winds over the Brookhaven Country Club course to post a 54-hole total of 1-over 217.

A shot back came Sandra Palmer, Jo Ann Washam and Mary Bea Porter. Brownlee won $7,500 and the other three took home $3,786.

"I didn't even know I was in the lead until the 18th," said Brownlee, a Penn State graduate. "My caddie kept hiding me from the leaderboards."

So close ... Lake Park falls, 28-27

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

They tried the play once too often. The quarterback sprints right, the leading back blocks the onrushing tackle, and the trailing end circles from across the field underneath the defensive safety.

Lake Park Hgh School's John Robinson rolled right with the ball in the third overtime against visiting Hillcrest Saturday afternoon looking for the Lancers' tight end Michael Roudabush.

His release seemed to be on target as Lake Park went for the two point conversion and win. But Hillcrest's middle guard Ron Vaught slipped undetected into the middle and knocked down the game winning pass. Hillcrest's 28-27 overtime win over Lake Park thwarted a second half comeback by the Lancers. The loss evened Lake Park's record at 2-2.

"I CALLED the play all the way," Lake Park head coach Bob Monken said. "There's no way (John) Robinson should take the blame for the loss. It was just one of those things.

"It was a sprint pass right opening up the middle. It was a successful play for us all day. It's just too bad I couldn't come up with a win for these guys after they played their hearts out," Monken added.

The same play late in the fourth quarter set up a 28-yard field goal attempt by Lake Park's Steve Aevermann that would have given the Lancers a 17-14 win in regulation time. The kick was wide.

That was one reason why we went for the two-points in overtime," Monken explained. "There was extra pressure on us because our kicking game wasn't up to par.

"Besides, three overtimes is long enough for anyone. And you're out there battling for a win, not a tie."

THE LANCERS sent the game into overtime with a 14-point splurge in the third quarter. Halfback James Ellman's one-yard plunge to tie the score at 14-14, enabled the suspense to unfold.

Only two and a half minutes elapsed after halftime when Lake Park finally broke its scoring drought. Ellman's 18-yard touchdown run off right tackle put the Lancers on the board.

Robinson's run for the two-point conversion cut Hillcrest's lead to 14-8.

"We just played one great game but couldn't show a win for it," Monken remarked. "The kids scored 27-points in the second half and two out of three overtime periods."

While both teams went scoreless in the first overtime series of downs from the 10-yard line, Lake Park made the initial move for victory.

ROBINSON CONNECTED with halfback Chris Sanford down the right sidelines on second and 10. Sanford's extra point kick was good for a 21-14 lead.

On Hillcrest's first play, tailback George Anderson darted through the Lancer's defense for a 10-yard scoring run. They went for the tying kick rather than the win.

"There wasn't any question in my mind that they were going to kick," Monken said. "Especially with the power they had in their kicker."

With :59 second remaining in regulation time, Hillcrest's Ted Chakos tried a 48-yard field goal. The wind-aided flight still came up short.

The tables reversed in the final overtime as Hillcrest scored first. Again they kicked the extra point.

Naperville North wins gold classic

Naperville North successfully defended its golf title Saturday in the rain-drenched Conant Cougar Classic at the Hilldale Country Club.

By shooting a team total of 329 for the 18-hole Classic, Naperville North edged Wheaton North by three strokes. Forest View came in third with 333 and Hoffman Estates followed with 334.

Conant's Randy Severinsen was the medalist for the day with a 77 to nip East Leyden's Gary Czaplicki and Naperville North's Steve Hoffman by one stroke.

So close ... Lake Park falls, 28-27

by RICK CHRISTOPHER

They tried the play once too often. The quarterback sprints right, the leading back blocks the onrushing tackle, and the trailing end circles from across the field underneath the defensive safety.

Lake Park Hgh School's John Robinson rolled right with the ball in the third overtime against visiting Hillcrest Saturday afternoon looking for the Lancers' tight end Michael Roudabush.

His release seemed to be on target as Lake Park went for the two point conversion and win. But Hillcrest's middle guard Ron Vaught slipped undetected into the middle and knocked down the game winning pass. Hillcrest's 28-27 overtime win over Lake Park thwarted a second half comeback by the Lancers. The loss evened Lake Park's record at 2-2.

"I CALLED the play all the way," Lake Park head coach Bob Monken said. "There's no way (John) Robinson should take the blame for the loss. It was just one of those things.

"It was a sprint pass right opening up the middle. It was a successful play for us all day. It's just too bad I couldn't come up with a win for these guys after they played their hearts out," Monken added.

The same play late in the fourth quarter set up a 28-yard field goal attempt by Lake Park's Steve Aevermann that would have given the Lancers a 17-14 win in regulation time. The kick was wide.

That was one reason why we went for the two-points in overtime," Monken explained. "There was extra pressure on us because our kicking game wasn't up to par.

"Besides, three overtimes is long enough for anyone. And you're out there battling for a win, not a tie."

THE LANCERS sent the game into overtime with a 14-point splurge in the third quarter. Halfback James Ellman's one-yard plunge to tie the score at 14-14, enabled the suspense to unfold.

Only two and a half minutes elapsed after halftime when Lake Park finally broke its scoring drought. Ellman's 18-yard touchdown run off right tackle put the Lancers on the board.

Robinson's run for the two-point conversion cut Hillcrest's lead to 14-8.

"We just played one great game but couldn't show a win for it," Monken remarked. "The kids scored 27-points in the second half and two out of three overtime periods."

While both teams went scoreless in the first overtime series of downs from the 10-yard line, Lake Park made the initial move for victory.

ROBINSON CONNECTED with halfback Chris Sanford down the right sidelines on second and 10. Sanford's extra point kick was good for a 21-14 lead.

On Hillcrest's first play, tailback George Anderson darted through the Lancer's defense for a 10-yard scoring run. They went for the tying kick rather than the win.

"There wasn't any question in my mind that they were going to kick," Monken said. "Especially with the power they had in their kicker."

With :59 second remaining in regulation time, Hillcrest's Ted Chakos tried a 48-yard field goal. The wind-aided flight still came up short.

The tables reversed in the final overtime as Hillcrest scored first. Again they kicked the extra point.

Lake Park match the scoring drive on Robinson's one-yard plunge. The disheartening pass was next.

DKIPLOMATIC DUO. A pair of world travelers, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Cosmos soccer star Pele greet each other before game concluding Pele's playing career. Nearly 76,000 people witnessed the farewell event.

Pele bid farewell

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Pele, the king of soccer, put away his crown Saturday.

He played his last game and scored his last goal and then he said, "I died a little bit."

But the 75,646 fans who filled a rain-soaked Meadowlands stadium came not to bury Pele but to praise him.

They did so with a fervor the stadium has never seen — a three-minute standing ovation before the game, a deafening roar of delight when he scored his 1,281st goal, prolonged applause at halftime ceremonies, and a rapturous long hurrah as the 36-year-old Brazilian superstar was borne bare-chested from the field on the shoulders of his teammates to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

It was a fitting farewell for a king.

The match, taking place mostly in blinding rain, brought together the only two clubs for who Pele has played in his 22-year career — the Cosmos and Santos of Brazil.

For the record, the Cosmos won 2-1, with goals from Ramon Mifflin and Pele — the latter's one of the best of his career — while Reynaldo scored for Santos.

But this was one occasion when the game was not the thing. The man was.

Doing him honor were Muhammad Ali, Henry Kissinger, five winning World Cup captains including Bobby Moore of England and West Germany's Franz Beckenbauer, film star Robert Redford, 761 media representatives from 25 countries and President Carter's son Jeff, who gave Pele a trophy in tribute to his sporting efforts for the United States.

Barber rally earns Silverado title

NAPA, Calif. — Miller Barber, one of the most consistent money winners on the PGA Tour but without a victory since 1974, shot a 7-under-par 65 Sunday to overtake front-runner George Archer and win the $200,000 Classic at Silverado by two strokes.

The 46-year-old Barber, who said he never doubted he'd win again even though his last victory came three years ago in the Ohio King's Island Open, started the final round on a perfect golfing day six shots behind Archer, who tied the Worth Course record at Silverado on Saturday with a 63.

But Archer ran into driving problems in the final round and wound up with a 1-over 73 while Barber made three birdies in the last four holes to overhaul him and win $40,000.

Archer won $22,800 and said he was lucky to save second place from young Howard Twitty, who set a course record 62 and finished a shot behind Archer and three behind Barber.

John Schroeder closed with a 66 to finish in fourth place at 277 and win $9,400 while Mac McLendon and Grier Jones wound up at 278 and won $7,700 each.

Tom Watson, winner of six events this year including the Masters and British Open, finished in a tie at 280 and won $5,225, which boosted his 1977 earnings to more than $310,000.

Hunt wins race; Lauda claims title

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. — James Hunt of Britain, driving a McLaren and with a pinched nerve in his left arm, beat American Mario Andretti's Lotus by three seconds Sunday in the United States Grand Prix auto race that saw Niki Lauda of Austria clinch his second Formula One title in three years with a fourth-place finish.

Hunt, who injured his arm last year while winning the Grand Prix title and is still plagued by pain and stiffness, took the lead in the 15th lap when Hans Stuck of Germany pulled his Brabham to the side of the Watkins Glen road racing course with mechanical problems.

It was Hunt's second straight U.S. Grand Prix victory, a feat performed only once previously, by the late Jim Clark of Britain in 1966-67.

Lauda and his red Ferrari entered the race with 69 points and needed only one more for the championship clincher. A sixth-place finish would have given him the title, but the gutsy Austrian, a near fatality in a flaming crash last year in Germany, moved into fourth place on the 15th lap and refused to budge from that position as he played it safe.

Brownlee tops Dallas Open field

DALLAS — Vivian Brownlee, who had never won anything more than a club championship, outfought three veteran players to win the $50,000 Dallas Civitan Open by a shot Sunday.

Brownlee, 30, fired a 1-over-par 73 in gusting winds over the Brookhaven Country Club course to post a 54-hole total of 1-over 217.

A shot back came Sandra Palmer, Jo Ann Washam and Mary Bea Porter. Brownlee won $7,500 and the other three took home $3,786.

"I didn't even know I was in the lead until the 18th," said Brownlee, a Penn State graduate. "My caddie kept hiding me from the leaderboards."

Brownlee had won only $14,070 in 25 events this year.

Naperville North wins gold classic

Naperville North successfully defended its golf title Saturday in the rain-drenched Conant Cougar Classic at the Hilldale Country Club.

By shooting a team total of 329 for the 18-hole Classic, Naperville North edged Wheaton North by three strokes. Forest View came in third with 333 and Hoffman Estates followed with 334.

Conant's Randy Severinsen was the medalist for the day with a 77 to nip East Leyden's Gary Czaplicki and Naperville North's Steve Hoffman by one stroke.
